

Longmont Braces Reaffirms Commitment to Community Orthodontic Care for Local Families

September 04, 2026

LONGMONT, CO - September 04, 2026 -

Longmont Braces, an orthodontic practice serving Longmont, Colorado, has reaffirmed its ongoing commitment to providing orthodontic care for children, teenagers, and adults throughout the surrounding community. Led by Dr. Stephanie Ross and Dr. Aden Peterson, the practice continues to focus on personalized treatment planning, patient education, and lasting relationships with the families it serves.

The practice provides orthodontic treatment for patients at various stages of life, from young children benefiting from early evaluation to adults seeking treatment later in life. Each treatment recommendation is based on the individual needs and goals of the patient, an approach the practice has maintained as demand for orthodontic services across Colorado has continued to grow. In recent years, the practice has observed an increasing number of adult patients pursuing treatment, a trend that has accelerated as options have become more diverse and discreet.

Among the services available are traditional metal and clear braces, Invisalign clear aligner therapy, dentofacial orthopedics, surgical orthodontics, two-phase treatment plans, and temporary anchorage devices. The practice also provides emergency orthodontic care for existing patients experiencing urgent issues. This full range of treatment options allows the orthodontic team at Longmont Braces to develop treatment plans suited to a wide variety of patient circumstances and lifestyles.

Beyond clinical treatment, the practice places emphasis on patient education. Comprehensive treatment planning sessions give patients and families time to understand available options before beginning care. This educational focus reflects a broader commitment to supporting families throughout each stage of the orthodontic process, from the initial consultation through post-treatment care.

"Providing compassionate, patient-centered care has always been at the heart of what this practice does," said Dr. Stephanie Ross. "Every patient who walks through the door has different needs and goals, and taking the time to understand those needs is what allows the practice to serve the Longmont community well. Building lasting relationships with families and being a trusted resource for them over the years is something the entire team values deeply."

The practice serves patients of all ages, recognizing that orthodontic needs differ significantly between pediatric, teenage, and adult patients. For younger patients, dentofacial orthopedics and two-phase treatment can guide facial growth and development during childhood. For teens and adults, options such as Invisalign offer a more discreet approach to treatment. This breadth of care reflects the role the practice has established as a local orthodontic provider committed to community orthodontic care.

As the practice looks ahead, its focus remains on maintaining the individualized attention that has defined its work in Longmont. The team continues to dedicate time to understanding each patient's situation and to guiding families through the treatment process with clear communication and support.
