The Eskesen Law Firm Launches New Slip and Fall Legal Resource for Residents

September 04, 2026

NEW YORK, NY - September 04, 2026 -
The Eskesen Law Firm has announced the launch of a new informational resource focused on premises liability and slip and fall accidents in Brooklyn, New York. The resource is intended to provide members of the community with accessible information about the legal considerations that may arise following an accident on a property.

Led by John Eskesen, The Eskesen Law Firm developed the resource to address common questions surrounding slip and fall incidents, including what steps accident victims may consider taking after an injury, how evidence can be preserved, and how premises liability claims are generally evaluated under New York law. The resource also examines circumstances that may contribute to these accidents, such as poorly maintained walkways, defective stairs, inadequate lighting, and other potentially hazardous conditions.

Slip and fall accidents can occur in a variety of public and private settings, including apartment buildings, retail establishments, office properties, sidewalks, and other locations where property owners or managers may have responsibilities related to maintenance and safety. Determining whether a property condition contributed to an accident can require consideration of the circumstances surrounding the incident, the condition itself, and whether the responsible party had notice of the hazard.

The newly launched resource provides an overview of these considerations while explaining why documentation can be important after an accident. Photographs of the location, information about witnesses, incident reports, and medical records may all become relevant when evaluating the circumstances of an injury. The resource encourages individuals to understand the importance of preserving information that may help establish what occurred.

The Eskesen Law Firm's initiative also highlights the role of medical attention following a slip and fall accident. Injuries associated with these incidents can range from relatively minor conditions to more serious injuries that affect a person's ability to work or perform everyday activities. Prompt medical evaluation can help address health concerns while also creating documentation of injuries and treatment related to an accident.

New York premises liability law can involve several factors when determining whether a property owner or another responsible party may be liable for an injury. Questions can include whether a dangerous condition existed, whether the responsible party knew or reasonably should have known about the condition, and whether appropriate action was taken to correct or warn about the hazard. The circumstances of each case can differ, making an understanding of the applicable legal standards particularly relevant for accident victims.

The firm's new resource is also designed to explain the types of damages that may potentially be considered in a personal injury claim. Depending on the circumstances, damages can involve medical expenses, lost income, and other losses associated with an injury. The availability and value of any potential recovery depend on the facts of an individual case and the applicable law.

The launch reflects The Eskesen Law Firm's ongoing focus on providing information about personal injury and premises liability issues affecting the Brooklyn community. By making legal information more accessible, the firm seeks to contribute to greater public awareness of property safety and the legal considerations that can follow an accident.

For individuals researching their legal options after a premises-related injury, information from a Brooklyn slip and fall attorney can provide additional context regarding the circumstances of a potential claim. Legal professionals may review details surrounding an accident, available evidence, the nature of the injuries, and other relevant factors when determining what legal options may be available.

The resource also emphasizes the importance of property maintenance and hazard prevention. Property owners, landlords, businesses, and other responsible parties can play an important role in reducing preventable accidents by identifying potentially dangerous conditions and addressing them appropriately. Greater awareness of these responsibilities can benefit both property occupants and the broader Brooklyn community.

The Eskesen Law Firm continues to provide legal services involving personal injury and premises liability matters. Individuals seeking additional information about slip and fall cases can review the firm's newly introduced resource or contact the firm to learn more about its legal services. Those researching representation may also consult a Brooklyn slip and fall attorney to discuss the specific circumstances surrounding an accident and determine whether further legal evaluation is appropriate.
