

EMD Commercial Cleaning Expands Operations to Serve Broader Mix of Commercial Clients

September 04, 2026

OAKDALE, MN - September 04, 2026 -

EMD Commercial Cleaning has expanded its operations to support a wider range of commercial clients, including high-profile brands, private enterprises, local companies, and global corporations. The development reflects growth in demand for consistent commercial cleaning among organizations that require reliable staffing, documented processes, and facilities that remain inspection-ready.

The company has worked exclusively with commercial clients for more than 15 years. Its current client mix includes offices, industrial and warehouse facilities, medical buildings, schools, and global corporations. As accounts have grown in scale and complexity, EMD Commercial Cleaning has continued to apply the same operating model: assigned crews that return to the same properties, hands-on leadership, and 24/7 communication for issues that cannot wait until the next scheduled visit.

Services covering this expanded client base include janitorial routines for common areas, office cleaning, commercial building maintenance, carpet cleaning, strip and wax work on vinyl composite tile floors, and industrial facility cleaning. Indoor work typically includes dusting, restroom sanitation, break room cleaning, floor care, vacuuming, disinfection of high-touch surfaces, and trash and recycling removal. Outdoor work can include power washing, parking lot sweeping, and emptying trash stations.

EMD Commercial Cleaning serves properties across Saint Paul, Minneapolis, Bloomington, Eden Prairie, Eagan, Inver Grove Heights, Woodbury, Oakdale, Maplewood, Mendota Heights, and Hudson, Wisconsin. Customized checklists are developed with facility managers so that scopes match building type, traffic patterns, and industry requirements. Medical and healthcare accounts follow protocols aligned with applicable OSHA, CDC, and related standards. Schools and other high-occupancy sites require schedules that adapt to operational hours and seasonal volume.

Larger organizations and global corporations often operate multiple departments, after-hours production, or brand standards that leave little room for missed details. Private enterprises and local companies frequently need the same accountability without adding internal supervision of cleaning crews. EMD Commercial Cleaning addresses both by taking responsibility for results rather than treating cleaning as a rotating vendor task.

"Growth in our client base has included national and global organizations alongside long-standing local and privately held accounts," said Marin Morales, Operations Manager at EMD Commercial Cleaning. "The common requirement is consistent staffing and clear communication, regardless of company size."

"Facilities used by high-profile brands and everyday local businesses still need the same fundamentals: crews who know the building and leadership that answers when something needs attention," added Morales. "That is the standard the company applies as operations expand."

The company assigns the same trained staff to each account to reduce the variability associated with rotating crews. Leadership remains involved in planning and follow-through. This structure is intended to protect buildings, brand presentation, and day-to-day operations for clients that cannot absorb missed restrooms, incomplete floor care, or delayed responses.

Client comments published on the company's site and related review listings describe professionalism, flexibility, and attention to detail in warehouse, office, and school settings. Reviews also note responsiveness from Marin and crew members such as Juan when scopes change or additional rooms need to be added.

EMD Commercial Cleaning was founded to address recurring problems in commercial cleaning, including poor communication, incomplete work, and frequent staff turnover. It does not serve residential accounts. The company continues to tailor plans to each property rather than applying a single checklist across every industry. That approach now supports a client roster that ranges from neighborhood businesses to global corporations operating facilities in the Twin Cities metro area.

As operations have expanded, the company has kept its focus on commercial and industrial work, customized scopes, and accountable delivery. The September update reflects a broader mix of client types rather than a change in the underlying service model. EMD Commercial Cleaning remains positioned as a long-term facilities partner for organizations that need consistent cleaning across offices, production floors, healthcare settings, schools, and multi-tenant properties.
