Ionox has released reviews on their Ionox pencil grips for special needs from customers who purchased the item for people with fine motor issues or other special needs. The grips are designed to be ergonomic and used by both left-handed and right-handed customers. They come in a mix of six vibrant colors.

?The pencil grips are very sturdy, but soft because of them being made of silicon. My granddaughter has special needs, she just made 11. She said she likes them and they help her when she is trying to write. She said it makes it easy for her to hold her pencil and write. They also fit over her paint brushes and colors. She paints and colors all the time,? said one customer.

One special education teacher who gave the product a five-star review said, ?pencil grips making writing so much more fun! I am an special education educator and work with all grade levels - Pre-K through High School and I don't care how old or young you are, pencil grips are fun. I even use them when I write with a pencil - sometimes even with a pen. Keeping these on hand is a must because you never know when a student would benefit from using one.?

?Two of my four children have special needs. We have worked through occupational therapy with both of them. They are very different in their areas of need yet both struggled with small motor skills. This set of 12 Pencil Grips in assorted colors, two each of red, yellow, blue, green, pink and purple give us a good assortment for each of them. The slide onto pens, pencils and paint brushes and guide the fingers to a natural positioning for a solid grip. They are made of food grade silicone so not concerns about latex allergy or BPA toxins,? said another reviewer.

The pencil grips are available now for purchase on Amazon. To read more reviews, or to find out more information about the product, visit <http://www.amazon.com/pencil-grips-for-special-needs/dp/b01415jirk/>.
