ITS Environmental Services Highlights Certified Biohazard Cleanup Risks for New York Residents

September 18, 2026

YAPHANK, NY - September 18, 2026 -
ITS Environmental Services is drawing attention to the safety risks associated with improper biohazard cleanup and the importance of using certified professionals for crime scene cleanup, unattended death cleanup, and blood cleanup throughout New York and the Tri-State area. The company, based at 78 Horseblock Road Unit 7, Yaphank, NY 11980, is emphasizing that biohazard situations require specialized training, equipment, and regulatory knowledge that untrained individuals typically lack.

Biohazard scenes can contain bloodborne pathogens, harmful bacteria, and other contaminants that pose serious health hazards when handled incorrectly. Improper cleanup can leave behind infectious material, spread contamination to unaffected areas, and expose individuals to viruses and pathogens that may not be visible to the eye. Certified remediation follows established protocols designed to protect both occupants and workers.

The team at ITS Environmental Services holds IICRC and CEICR certifications and has more than fifteen years of experience serving the New York, Long Island, and Tri-State region. Each biohazard project is completed in accordance with industry standards for containment, disinfection, and disposal, addressing hazards that are often overlooked during standard cleaning efforts.

"Many people do not realize that a biohazard scene is not something that can be safely handled with household cleaning products," said Doug Baruchin, President of ITS Environmental Services. "Bloodborne pathogens and other contaminants require proper containment, disinfection, and disposal that only trained and certified technicians can provide. The goal is to protect the health of everyone who enters the space after cleanup is complete."

Beyond the technical requirements, biohazard cleanup frequently follows traumatic events, including deaths, accidents, and crime scenes. The company approaches each situation with compassion and discretion, recognizing that families and property owners are often navigating difficult circumstances. Work is performed with sensitivity to privacy and the emotional weight of the situation.

ITS Environmental Services provides 24/7 emergency response, allowing situations to be addressed promptly when timing is critical to limiting contamination and further damage. The company offers free estimates within thirty miles of its Yaphank location and works directly with insurance providers to help reduce the administrative burden on customers during the restoration process.

"Responding quickly and working alongside insurance providers helps take some of the pressure off of people during an already stressful time," Baruchin added. "Certification and experience matter in this field, and they directly affect the safety of the outcome."

The company is encouraging residents and property managers across the region to verify certification and credentials before engaging any biohazard cleanup provider, noting that proper documentation and adherence to safety standards are essential in these situations.

ITS Environmental Services is a comprehensive disaster restoration and extreme cleanup provider serving the New York, Long Island, and Tri-State area. Its services include environmental restoration such as water damage restoration, fire and smoke damage cleanup, asbestos abatement, and spill cleanup, as well as biohazard cleaning, disinfection, and property restoration and rebuilding. The company is licensed, insured, and certified, with more than a decade of experience in the field.
