Richmond-based J.Mac Garage Doors Ltd. approaches a 35-year milestone serving Lower Mainland homeowners with residential garage door sales, service and repair.

J.Mac Garage Doors Ltd., a family-run residential garage door company serving Greater Vancouver since 1991, is approaching its 35th anniversary as the region's homeowners begin seasonal maintenance on their garage doors ahead of fall and winter.

Founded in Richmond in 1991, J.Mac Garage Doors Ltd. has served Lower Mainland homeowners through three decades of changing housing stock, evolving door technology and shifting weather patterns. As the Pacific Northwest moves into its wettest months, the company's 35th year in operation coincides with the period when garage door systems are used most heavily. A residential garage door is typically the largest moving component of any home, and its springs, cables and opener undergo stress with every cycle, particularly during the cooler, rainier months of the year.

Jim McCormack, founder and owner of J.Mac Garage Doors Ltd., said the company's longevity reflects cumulative experience that matters most when something fails unexpectedly. 'I started this company in 1991, and thirty-five years later we still answer the same Richmond phone number. The real measure of that time is not the number of doors we have installed, it is the number of homeowners who call us back when a spring lets go or the opener stops working. People remember who showed up when the car was stuck inside, and that trust is the only reason we are still here. Every repair we do draws on decades of seeing the same problems on the same kinds of homes across the Lower Mainland.'

The company operates out of Richmond and covers Vancouver, Burnaby, North Vancouver, West Vancouver, Surrey, Coquitlam, Langley, Delta, Ladner, Tsawwassen, New Westminster, White Rock and Bowen Island. It supplies and installs Clopay garage doors and LiftMaster openers, performs spring replacements, cable repairs, track alignments and opener upgrades, and offers in-home consultations for new door installations. Homeowners exploring new options can browse garage doors for Vancouver area homes on the company's website. J.Mac carries an A+ Better Business Bureau rating and belongs to the International Door Association, reflecting a commitment to quality that has sustained its reputation across the region.

For homeowners across the Lower Mainland, the transition from summer to fall is a natural checkpoint for the overhead door system. A door that cycles smoothly in milder weather may show signs of wear once temperatures drop and seasonal rainfall increases. The company recommends that homeowners pay attention to unusual noises during operation, slower-than-normal opening or closing, doors that do not seal evenly at the bottom, or any visible signs of wear on cables and springs. Catching these early can prevent the kind of mid-season failure that leaves a vehicle trapped inside or the garage exposed to the elements. A simple visual inspection of the tracks and rollers can reveal misalignments before they cause a jam.

J.Mac Garage Doors Ltd. has been family-operated since its founding by Jim and Angie McCormack and welcomes garage door repair requests across Greater Vancouver from homeowners throughout the Lower Mainland. The company offers urgent call service for emergency breakdowns and same-week scheduling for routine maintenance and upgrades. Homeowners can learn more about the company, its history and the full range of services on the J.Mac garage door service website or contact the office directly during business hours.
