

Doxa Custom Homes LLC Launches Media Room Featuring Kitchen Remodeling in Knoxville Insights

September 18, 2026

KNOXVILLE, TN - September 18, 2026 -

Doxa Custom Homes LLC has introduced a dedicated Media Room, a centralized hub for company announcements, project updates, community news, and educational content designed to help homeowners, media outlets, and referral partners better understand the family-owned design and build company serving West Knoxville, Farragut, and the greater Knoxville area.

The new section brings together press releases, remodeling insights, and practical guidance across the company's core services, including kitchen remodeling, bathroom remodeling, full home remodels, home additions, design-build remodeling, and custom home construction. The launch reflects a commitment to transparent communication and to serving the community as a trustworthy resource rather than a sales channel.

A central focus of the Media Room is educational content around Kitchen remodeling in Knoxville, an area where homeowners often seek clarity on process, budgeting, and project management. The company plans to publish articles that explain the difference between full-service and labor-only remodels, outline typical timelines, and describe how design planning, cabinetry specification, material selection, and scheduling come together within a single professionally managed contract.

"Homeowners deserve straightforward information before they invest in a major renovation," said Emik Nikora, Founder of Doxa Custom Homes LLC. "The Media Room exists to answer the questions people actually have, from how a remodel is planned to how progress is tracked, so families can make confident decisions about their homes."

The company reports that a full-service kitchen remodel in Knoxville, West Knoxville, and Farragut generally begins around $70,000 to $80,000, with cabinetry alone often representing $30,000 to $40,000 of that figure. In a full-service arrangement, tasks such as selecting, ordering, receiving, storing, and scheduling are managed by the company, while a labor-only approach places those responsibilities on the homeowner. Doxa Homes uses project management software to keep clients informed of the schedule and current stage of the work throughout each build.

Nikora has worked in construction since 2004 and has been building in Tennessee since 2013. Under his direction, the company has developed a people-first approach grounded in values of faith, integrity, craftsmanship, clear communication, and respect for each homeowner's investment.

"The measure of the work is the relationship that remains after the project is complete," Nikora said. "The Media Room is one more way to be open about how the company operates and what homeowners can expect at every step."

Through the Media Room, Doxa Homes intends to share community news, portfolio updates, and ongoing educational material covering kitchen remodeling, bathroom remodeling, full home remodels, design-build remodeling, and fine construction. The goal is to provide a consistent, credible source of information that supports homeowners well before and long after a project begins.
