

Printbox London Expands Custom Envelope Printing For Matching Sets

September 16, 2026

September 16, 2026 -

Printbox London (Same Day Printing London) has expanded its custom envelope printing service for households and small businesses across Haringey, in response to a rise in customers who want envelopes to match invitations, correspondence cards, and other stationery orders placed at the same time.

Printbox London (Same Day Printing London) provides custom envelope printing for households and small businesses throughout Haringey, with options designed to coordinate with accompanying invitations, correspondence cards, and business stationery for a consistent finished set. The shop, which has traded from West Green Road in South Tottenham since 2014, can complete many of these combined orders on the same day.

Haringey's mix of independent retailers and hospitality businesses along the Green Lanes corridor, together with a growing number of freelancers and sole traders working from the borough, has created steady demand for coordinated stationery that can be turned around without long lead times. Wedding invitations, thank you notes, and small business correspondence are among the most common combined orders received at the shop, and customers increasingly ask for the envelope itself to be printed rather than left blank, whether to carry a return address, a monogram, or a simple design element that ties the whole set together visually.

The service sits alongside the shop's existing range for personal occasions, including weddings, birthdays, anniversaries and funerals, where a matching set of an invitation or notice, a correspondence card and an envelope is often ordered together rather than as separate items from separate suppliers. Community groups, schools and local clubs in Haringey have also used the combined service for event invitations and notices sent out to members, where a consistent, professionally printed look matters even for a modest print run.

Each custom envelope order goes through an artwork proofing step before printing, so customers can check wording, positioning and colour before a full run is produced. This applies whether the order is placed online, by email, or in person at the West Green Road shop, and staff are on hand in-store to talk through paper weight, finish and envelope size for customers who are unsure which option best suits their event or their business correspondence.

Kapil Nath, Owner at Printbox London (Same Day Printing London), said the change reflects a pattern the shop has been seeing at the counter for some time. "We noticed that more and more people ordering invitations or correspondence cards were also asking whether we could do matching envelopes," Kapil Nath said. "It made sense to build that into the standard order rather than sending people elsewhere for something that can be coordinated as part of the same stationery order."

The shop's proximity to Seven Sisters Underground and Overground station means a large number of customers already pass through the area on their daily commute, and Kapil Nath said the combined printing option has proved popular with people fitting an order around a working day rather than making a separate trip for envelopes alone. Micro-businesses and sole traders based in Haringey have also adopted the service for branded correspondence accompanying invoices, quotes, or thank-you notes sent to clients.

Custom envelope printing joins a wider stationery range already offered by the West Green Road shop, including correspondence cards, invitations, menu cards and thank-you cards, all of which can be produced on the same visit or in the same online order. The expanded envelope option follows the shop's introduction of custom booklet printing in July 2026, another addition to a stationery and print catalogue that has grown steadily over the shop's twelve years on West Green Road. Printbox London (Same Day Printing London) continues to offer in-person advice for customers unsure about paper stock, finish, or envelope size before committing to a full print run, alongside its existing online ordering option for those who prefer to arrange everything remotely. Further information about the shop's stationery printing options is available on its Facebook page.
