

Superior Overhead Doors Expands Showroom Inventory to Help Homeowners Compare Garage Door Options

September 23, 2026

BROKEN ARROW, OK - September 23, 2026 -

Superior Overhead Doors, a locally owned garage door company serving Broken Arrow and the surrounding Tulsa County area, has expanded its showroom inventory to give homeowners a broader range of styles, materials, and finishes to compare before selecting a replacement, upgrade, or new garage door.

The expanded selection arrives as many area homeowners weigh garage door replacements. A garage door often accounts for a significant portion of a home's front-facing appearance, and the decision involves far more than a single style choice. Superior Overhead Doors - Broken Arrow, OK encourages homeowners to review several factors together rather than in isolation.

Among the considerations are style and material, since steel, wood, composite, and aluminum each perform differently over time. Insulation values matter for attached garages and rooms located above or beside the space, while window placement affects both natural light and privacy. Decorative hardware and color selections influence curb appeal, and opener compatibility determines whether existing equipment can remain in use or requires updating.

Maintenance needs and long term performance round out the list. Doors vary in how often they require tune-ups, spring service, and cable adjustments, and understanding those requirements in advance helps homeowners set realistic expectations. Viewing multiple options side by side allows for clearer comparisons than reviewing images alone.

"Homeowners often focus on one detail, such as color, and overlook how insulation or opener compatibility will affect the door for years," said Todd Willhoite of Superior Overhead Doors. "The purpose of a larger showroom selection is to let people see and touch different materials, compare window layouts, and understand the trade-offs before they decide."

The company noted that garage door installation by Superior Overhead Doors follows the same in-person approach. Customers meet the technicians who will service their home and can examine products directly rather than relying solely on catalogs. The company does not use subcontractors and performs installation work with its own crews.

"A garage door is a long term investment in both function and appearance," Willhoite added. "Seeing the full range of choices in one place tends to make the decision easier and reduces second-guessing later."

Homeowners considering a project can review the recent Superior Overhead Doors showroom inventory update for additional detail on the newly available selection. Free estimates are offered upon request.
