

GoGordian Real Estate Expands Properties for Sale in Cyprus with New Listings and Price Reductions

September 18, 2026

Nicosia, CY - September 18, 2026 -

New residential, commercial, industrial and land listings, together with selected price reductions, expand the range of real estate opportunities available to buyers across the island.

GoGordian Real Estate has announced the addition of new property listings for sale across Cyprus, alongside price reductions on selected existing properties. The latest updates expand the platform's selection of real estate opportunities for individuals, businesses and investors searching for properties across the island.

The announcement brings together two developments on the GoGordian Real Estate platform: the publication of new properties and reductions of the asking prices of selected existing listings. Together, these updates give prospective purchasers more properties and price points to consider when exploring the Cyprus real estate market.

A spokesperson for GoGordian Real Estate said: "By adding new properties for sale and reducing the asking prices of selected existing listings, we are expanding the range of opportunities available to buyers across Cyprus. Our aim is to make it easier for individuals, businesses and investors to explore different property types and locations through GoGordian Real Estate. Whether someone is searching for a home, commercial premises, industrial space or land, we want our platform to provide a broad selection of properties to consider.?

The newly published listings cover a broad range of property categories, including residential apartments and houses, commercial shops and offices, industrial units and warehouses, landmark buildings in established urban districts, development land and agricultural fields.

The additions are spread across all five districts of Cyprus, allowing buyers to explore opportunities in different locations and property categories through one platform.

The range of listings is intended to serve different property requirements, from individuals searching for a home to businesses seeking commercial or industrial premises and investors examining land or income-generating real estate opportunities.

Alongside the new listings, GoGordian Real Estate has reduced the asking prices of selected properties already available on the platform.

The price adjustments provide prospective purchasers with additional opportunities to review properties that may suit their requirements and budgets. Buyers can compare available listings, examine property details and assess different locations and property types when considering their next real estate purchase in Cyprus.

The combination of new listings and reduced prices reflects the ongoing activity of GoGordian Real Estate in maintaining and expanding its property portfolio.

Cyprus continues to attract interest from domestic and international buyers across residential, commercial and land markets. The island's location at the meeting point of Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, together with its established real estate market and international connectivity, contributes to its appeal to purchasers examining property opportunities.

Interest in Cyprus real estate extends across a variety of property uses, including residential accommodation, commercial premises, industrial facilities, development land and properties connected to tourism.

For buyers considering a property purchase in Cyprus, access to a diverse selection of listings across different districts and categories provides an opportunity to examine alternatives according to their individual requirements.

GoGordian Real Estate provides access to properties for sale across Cyprus, including residential, commercial, industrial and land assets. The latest listings and price reductions are now available through the platform, giving prospective purchasers the opportunity to explore new properties and selected reduced-price listings.
