

daylight AG Expands Student Information System Solutions for Swiss Educational Institutions

October 13, 2026

Winterthur, ZH - October 13, 2026 - daylight AG, a Swiss software company based in Winterthur, has broadened its suite of integrated administrative solutions designed to support schools, training providers, and educational organizations across Switzerland. The expansion reflects growing demand among educational institutions for unified digital systems that consolidate school administration, course management, examination processing, event coordination, and accounting into a single platform.

Educational institutions throughout Switzerland face increasing pressure to modernize operations while managing complex administrative workloads. A comprehensive student information system that centralizes these functions allows schools to reduce manual processes, improve data accuracy, and allocate more resources toward teaching and learning outcomes. daylight AG develops its software specifically for these needs, combining people and address management, registration handling, resource disposition, marketing, and financial accounting within one modular environment.

The company's platform is built to adapt to the individual processes of each organization it serves. Institutions can deploy the software either on-premise or through a cloud service, integrating it seamlessly into existing IT environments. The system also connects with leading financial applications, supporting consistent record-keeping across departments. These capabilities are documented further at pressadvantage.com/organization/daylight-ag, where the company maintains an ongoing record of its software developments.

With more than two decades of experience in educational technology, daylight AG has positioned its solutions to serve a wide range of users, including schools, small and medium-sized enterprises, and independent training providers. The software supports multilingual operation, reflecting the needs of Switzerland's diverse educational landscape. Features such as online portal and e-shop creation allow institutions to automate registration, confirmation, and payment workflows for courses, seminars, and events.

The company has introduced a series of updates to its product line in recent months. These developments have addressed school administration tasks, event management, course management, and accounting functions for education providers. Each update has focused on streamlining administrative work and strengthening the automation that underpins daily operations at educational institutions.

Administrative teams at schools and training organizations manage substantial volumes of data, from student records and course enrollments to examination results and financial transactions. Consolidating these elements within a single student information system reduces duplication and the risk of error that can arise when information is spread across separate tools. daylight AG designs its platform around this principle of unified management, aiming to simplify the workload for administrators while maintaining data integrity.
