June 09, 2016

June 09, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

K9 Basics Dog Training, which is based in Marlton, NJ, has announced that they have hired three new dog trainers: Arnold Apel, Jeffrey Beck, and Greg Adzima. All three have previously served in the United States Marine Corps. The addition of the new recruits brings the number of dog trainers in the company to nine.

Brian Berg, owner of K9 Basics, said: "It is an honor to get these three on our team. Their passion and experience fully complement our own base and philosophy. We are excited to be growing in a way that will benefit all dog owners and their canine companions."

The three new trainers will be handling the various training programs that K9 Basics Dog Training offers. The programs can be viewed on the 'Our Programs' section of the company's website. Apel, Beck, and Adzima are uniquely qualified to provide these programs due to their past experience, and also due to their personal passion for dogs and dog training.

Jeffrey Beck, for instance, was a full-time K9 Handler and Trainer as a Military Police Officer. He was responsible for the training of many Military Working Dogs (MWDs), developing the unique and highly popular Combat Tracking Dog program. He has himself, handled over twenty MWDs, including detection and patrol ones.

New trainer Arnold Apel grew up around dogs and dog training, helping to train family protection dogs. He often acted as the lost child and child handler in the training of these dogs. Within the Marine Corps, Apel became an MWD handler. As such, he has been involved with dog training all his life and can develop unique bonds with the dogs he trains and handles.

Greg Adzima, meanwhile, has numerous credentials for dog handling. Within the US Marine Corps, he was certified as a handler and trainer for obedience, patrol protection, explosive detection, and narcotics detection. He is also an AMK9 handler and trainer and has been certified in obedience, explosive detection, tracking, and patrol protection.

People are encouraged to learn more about the new trainers and the K9 Basics Dog Training programs through their website and to contact the company if they require dog training services.
