

HRC Climate Services Heating and Cooling Joins Best in Utah County 2026 Community Voting Campaign

September 22, 2026

SPANISH FORK, UT - September 22, 2026 -

HRC Climate Services Heating and Cooling, a family-owned HVAC company based in Spanish Fork, has joined the Best in Utah County 2026 community voting campaign and is inviting local residents to take part before the campaign closes on September 30.

The annual campaign highlights local businesses across Utah County and gives community members a chance to recognize the companies they rely on throughout the year. Participants may cast one vote per day during the voting period. HRC Climate Services Heating and Cooling is encouraging community members to learn more about the Best in Utah County voting campaign and participate through the official voting page.

For the company, the campaign is less about recognition and more about staying connected to the neighborhoods it serves. Over the years, the Spanish Fork-based team has helped homeowners across Utah County address heating, cooling, air conditioning service, furnace service, and routine maintenance needs, along with a range of home comfort concerns that come with Utah's shifting seasons.

"Being part of this campaign is a reminder of how much the community means to this company," said Alisha Casey, owner of HRC Climate Services Heating and Cooling. "The support from Utah County families over the years is something the team does not take for granted. Whether it is a furnace acting up in the middle of winter or an air conditioner struggling during a summer heat wave, helping neighbors stay comfortable in their homes is the heart of the work."

HRC Climate Services was founded on a family-operated model and brings more than 30 years of combined experience to residential and commercial projects throughout the region. The company provides services that include air conditioning repair and installation, furnace repair and installation, heat pump service, ductless mini-split systems, humidification, and seasonal HVAC maintenance. Commercial clients also turn to the company for refrigeration, rooftop units, and new construction support.

Seasonal timing adds relevance to the campaign period. As Utah County transitions from summer cooling to fall and winter heating, many homeowners begin scheduling furnace inspections and maintenance visits. Casey noted that the change of seasons is often when small issues surface, making it a practical time for households to review the condition of their heating systems.

"The end of summer is when many families start thinking about their furnaces again," Casey said. "A short conversation about voting in the campaign often leads to a helpful conversation about preparing a home for colder weather, and that connection with the community is what matters most."

Residents who wish to participate can find details through the HRC Climate Services Best in Utah County voting page during the campaign window.
