

Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite Expands Fernandina Beach Family Law Educational Resources for Nassau County Families

September 28, 2026

JACKSONVILLE, FL - September 28, 2026 -

Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite, a Northeast Florida law firm concentrating in family and criminal law, has expanded its focus on educational efforts designed to help individuals and families in Fernandina Beach and the surrounding Nassau County community better understand Florida family law. The initiative centers on providing clear, accessible information about the legal issues and processes people may encounter when family circumstances change.

The expanded educational focus responds to a recurring challenge many families face when navigating unfamiliar legal territory. Family law matters often involve terminology, procedures, and considerations that can be difficult to understand without guidance. By making Fernandina Beach family law resources more accessible, the firm aims to help residents identify the questions they need to address and prepare themselves before making decisions or entering an ongoing legal matter.

The educational materials cover topics that local families commonly encounter. These include divorce, parenting plans and timesharing, child support, and modifications to existing court orders. Additional subjects address adoption, paternity, alimony, and prenuptial and postnuptial agreements. Each topic reflects the range of situations that arise as family circumstances evolve, and the firm's approach emphasizes helping people understand the framework of Florida law that applies to their situation.

Access to clear information can change how individuals experience the legal process. Understanding basic terminology and the sequence of steps in a matter such as divorce or a custody dispute allows people to approach decisions with greater confidence. Educational resources also help families recognize when particular circumstances, such as a military divorce or a collaborative divorce, involve considerations that differ from a standard proceeding.

"Many people come to family law situations feeling uncertain about what to expect," said Jay Henderlite, Managing Partner and Board Certified Marital and Family Law Expert at Sasso Guerrero & Henderlite. "When individuals understand the terminology and the general process, they are better prepared to ask the right questions and consider their options thoughtfully. That is the purpose behind making these resources available to the Fernandina Beach and Nassau County community."

The firm's educational efforts extend beyond written materials. Members of the firm have discussed family law topics through the podcast When Split Happens, which addresses common questions and concerns people raise as they move through changes in their family lives. The program complements the firm's broader goal of helping families understand the legal landscape they may face.

"Information is a form of support," Henderlite added. "The goal is not to replace legal counsel but to give people in Nassau County a foundation of understanding so they feel prepared when family matters arise."

By distinguishing this effort from a description of available services, the firm emphasizes education and understanding over promotion. The intent is to serve as a source of reliable information for a community navigating some of the more personal legal questions individuals encounter.
