

Better Builders Details Role of Design-Build Remodeling Contractor for Seattle Metro Homeowners

October 01, 2026

SEATTLE, WA - October 01, 2026 -

Better Builders, a home construction and renovation contractor serving the Seattle metro area, is outlining how its work as a design-build remodeling contractor consolidates design and construction under a single team, a structure the company reports is drawing steady interest as regional demand for integrated home renovation services increases. The company brings more than 35 years of experience to residential projects and guides homeowners through a process that pairs planning and construction within one organization.

The Better Builders design-build remodeling method is organized into three stages, which the company describes as Discover, Design, and Build. During the Discover stage, the team works to understand a homeowner's needs and goals. The Design stage focuses on reimagining the space and developing a detailed plan, while the Build stage covers the construction work. Information about the company's completed projects and process is available on their website.

The approach spans a range of residential services, including kitchen remodeling in Seattle projects, whole-house remodels, home additions, basement conversions, and accessory dwelling unit construction. Bathroom Remodeling remains among the most frequently requested services, a pattern the company attributes to homeowners choosing to update existing spaces rather than relocate.

Pete Baughman, a project lead at Better Builders, said the design-build model addresses common issues homeowners encounter when coordinating separate designers and contractors. "When design and construction stay under one roof, homeowners deal with a single accountable team from the first sketch to the final walkthrough," Baughman said. "That continuity reduces miscommunication and keeps projects aligned with the original plan and budget."

The company serves communities throughout the Seattle metro region, including Ballard, Bellevue, Bothell, Issaquah, Kirkland, Mercer Island, Redmond, Renton, Sammamish, Shoreline, and Woodinville, among others. Each project is backed by a five-year craftsmanship warranty.

Better Builders incorporates sustainable products and building methods into its work as a member of Built Green. The company applies these practices across project types, from kitchen and bathroom updates to full home construction, and offers aging-in-place remodeling for homeowners seeking to remain in their homes as their needs change.

Baughman noted that the region's older housing stock plays a role in the ongoing interest in renovation. "Many homes in the area have solid bones but layouts and systems that no longer fit how people live today," he said. "Remodeling lets homeowners modernize function and comfort while preserving the character of a home they already have."

The company maintains a portfolio of case studies documenting completed projects across the metro area, which homeowners can use as reference points when planning renovations. Better Builders reports that its process centers on workmanship, communication, and durability throughout each phase of a project.

Better Builders is a design-build home construction and renovation contractor based in the Seattle metro area. With more than 35 years of remodeling experience, the company offers custom home building, whole-house remodels, kitchen and bathroom remodeling, home additions, basement renovations, ADU and DADU construction, outdoor living spaces, and sunroom and exterior projects.
