

Woodlawn Tree Service Marks 35 Years of Arborist-Led Care Across West Virginia

October 05, 2026

CABINS, WV - October 05, 2026 -

Woodlawn Tree Service, a full-service tree company and nursery based in Cabins, West Virginia, is highlighting its consistent record of five-star client reviews as it continues more than 35 years of operation across northeastern West Virginia.

The milestone reflects decades of work by a family-operated business known for its tree care expertise and its emphasis on the long-term health of trees. Owner Matt, a Board Certified Master Arborist, leads the company alongside his sons Zachary and Toby, handling projects that range from routine pruning to complex removals. The company's sustained reputation is documented through numerous published five-star reviews from clients throughout the region.

Woodlawn Tree Service's arborist combines field service with an on-site nursery, allowing the business to both maintain existing trees and supply new plantings suited to local conditions. Its offerings include tree pruning, tree health care, tree removal, and tree nursery and planting services. Consultation services are also available, drawing on the team's knowledge of regional tree ecosystems, common diseases, and pest pressures that affect trees in the area.

Tree pruning services focus on removing specific branches to support the overall structure and health of a tree, while also reducing the risk of disease and pest infestation. Tree health care work involves diagnosing and treating conditions that threaten a tree's vitality. Removal services address trees that are dead, diseased, or positioned in a way that poses a risk to property or people, with equipment suited to trees of varying sizes.

"The reviews reflect a straightforward approach that has stayed the same for more than three decades," said a spokesperson for Woodlawn Tree Service. "Every property is different, and the goal has always been to give each tree the attention it needs rather than applying a single method to every job."

The company operates as both a service provider and a grower, an arrangement that shapes how it advises clients on planting. Staff evaluates soil, climate, and site conditions before recommending species, an approach intended to improve the survival and long-term performance of newly planted trees. Recommendations are tied to the specific needs of each property owner and the surrounding environment.

"A tree planted in the right place can last for generations, and that starts with matching the species to the site," said the spokesperson. "Working from a nursery gives the team the ability to follow a tree from selection through planting and ongoing care."

Woodlawn continues to serve residential and commercial clients across its service region, with work concentrated in areas where seasonal storms, disease, and aging trees create ongoing demand for professional attention. As a tree company in Cabins, West Virginia, that pairs certified expertise with a growing operation, the business remains focused on maintaining the standards reflected in its client feedback.
