

Automobile Repair Company Launches Mobile Friendly Website

June 14, 2016

June 14, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Virginia Auto Repair, a business in Leesburg, VA, has declared with pride that the company website is now completely mobile responsive. They would like to emphasize that this allows customers to find more about them and their services even while they are on the go. Furthermore, they also announced that they will be adding more features to the site in the near future, including online service bookings and a customer service feedback system.

Frank West from Virginia Auto Repair says: "We are very excited about our mobile friendly site and about the new features that we will soon be adding. The customer service feedback system is going to be particularly powerful, as it will show us not just what we're doing well, but also where we can improve."

The auto repair company is currently engaged in an aggressive online marketing campaign. Besides updating their website to make it mobile responsive, they have also launched various social media pages. "We want to encourage everyone to follow us on Facebook," adds Frank West. "We use the Facebook page to share industry news, highlight special events and promotions, and more." In addition to Facebook, they have also launched their Twitter, LinkedIn, Google+, Pinterest, and YouTube channels.

Virginia Auto Repair is one of the most trusted companies of its kind in the area. They are known for offering not just repair services, but also for empowering their customers in making decisions that are most suitable for their particular vehicle, needs, and budget. "We really encourage people to take a look at not just the services we offer," adds Frank West, "but also at the various articles and pieces of information we have included on our site about the brands of products we use and recommend. Knowledge is power, as they say, and we want to make sure people know more about the options that are available to them."

The mobile responsive site is now fully live and ready to be enjoyed by customers on the go. Further announcements will be made in relation to the new features once they have been launched and are ready for use.
