

Nova Warranty Highlights Aston Martin Extended Warranty Options Following Valen Debut at Monterey

October 05, 2026

WILMINGTON, DE - October 05, 2026 -

Nova Warranty has drawn attention to protection options available to Aston Martin owners in the wake of the marque's latest flagship reveal. On August 14, 2026, Aston Martin unveiled the Valen at Monterey Car Week, a limited run of 150 examples generating 838 horsepower and 1,000 Nm of torque, positioning it as the most powerful front-engined production car yet built. First deliveries are scheduled for the second quarter of 2027, with pricing starting near two million dollars.

While the Valen represents the third bespoke V12 supercar from Aston Martin's Q division, the broader interest it has generated has turned a spotlight on the ownership experience across the brand's current lineup, including the DB12, DBX, Vantage, and Vanquish. Nova Warranty noted that many owners of these vehicles begin considering coverage once the manufacturer's factory warranty reaches its limits. Aston Martin's New Vehicle Limited Warranty provides three years of coverage with unlimited mileage, while its anti-perforation corrosion warranty extends to ten years with unlimited mileage.

An Aston Martin extended warranty can help cover eligible repair costs after the original factory coverage expires. Nova Warranty administers vehicle service programs for luxury and exotic vehicles, with contracts that may address components such as the engine, transmission, electrical systems, suspension, steering, and air conditioning, depending on the plan selected. The company also provides services including twenty-four-hour roadside assistance, towing, and parts and labor coverage under its more comprehensive tier.

According to Nova Warranty, certain repair concerns appear with some regularity among Aston Martin models, including engine-related issues, electrical system faults, and clutch wear in manual variants. Repairs to these systems can prove costly given the complexity of the vehicles and the specialized expertise required.

"The attention surrounding the Valen reflects the passion that defines Aston Martin ownership, and that same passion extends to how owners care for the cars already in their driveways," said a spokesperson for Nova Warranty. "The focus remains on helping owners of models such as the DB12, DBX, and Vantage understand the coverage available once a factory warranty concludes."

Nova Warranty offers extended warranty plans structured around two tiers, the Nova Powertrain program and the more comprehensive Nova Superior program.

"Coverage decisions should be based on facts rather than assumptions," the spokesperson added. "Each contract outlines exactly which components are included, which helps owners make informed choices about protecting their vehicles."

The company states that its service record is reflected in verified customer reviews published on independent platforms, where it maintains a rating of 4.8 out of 5 based on one hundred reviews.

Nova Warranty specializes in providing vehicle service programs for luxury, exotic, and everyday automobiles. The company offers free quotes, transparent pricing without hidden fees, and daily customer service staffed by experienced agents. Its coverage spans a range of Aston Martin models, among them the DBS, Vantage, V8 Vantage, DBX, DB12, DB5, Vanquish, and DB7. Nova Warranty operates as a direct administrator of vehicle service programs and uses warranty terminology for descriptive purposes.
