ITS Environmental Services Highlights Rising Demand for Biohazard Cleanup Services as Year-End Approaches

October 16, 2026

YAPHANK, NY - October 16, 2026 -
ITS Environmental Services is drawing attention to the seasonal increase in demand for biohazard cleanup services across New York and the Tri-State area as the final months of the year arrive. The company reports that the colder months historically correspond with a higher volume of calls for crime scene cleanup, blood cleanup, and suicide cleanup services, prompting the provider to reinforce its 24-hour response readiness.

Industry observers have long noted that the end-of-year period, marked by shorter days, extended cold weather, and heightened emotional stress, often brings an uptick in situations requiring professional biohazard remediation. For property owners, families, and businesses, these events frequently occur without warning and demand immediate, specialized attention that goes beyond conventional cleaning.

ITS Environmental Services provides biohazard cleaning that addresses crime scenes, unattended deaths, blood contamination, and suicide-related incidents. Each situation is handled with attention to proper disinfection, decontamination, and the safe disposal of hazardous materials. Trained technicians follow established protocols intended to return affected spaces to a safe and livable condition while treating those involved with discretion and care.

"The weeks surrounding the holidays and the turn of the year tend to bring an increase in the types of incidents that call for professional biohazard remediation," said Doug Baruchin of ITS Environmental Services. "The priority during these moments is to respond quickly, restore safety, and allow families and property owners to focus on what matters most rather than the cleanup itself."

The company notes that biohazard situations carry risks that are not always visible, including exposure to bloodborne pathogens and other contaminants. Professional remediation is intended to ensure that affected areas are thoroughly cleaned and disinfected according to recognized standards, reducing the potential for lingering health hazards.

"Each call is different, and many arrive during difficult and unexpected circumstances," Baruchin added. "The goal is to combine technical expertise with compassion, so that the process is handled responsibly from the first response through the final restoration."

Serving New York, Long Island, and the broader Tri-State area, ITS Environmental Services maintains availability around the clock for emergency situations. The company emphasizes that timely intervention is often an important factor in biohazard cases, where delays can complicate both the remediation process and the recovery of affected spaces.

Beyond biohazard cleaning, the company offers a broad scope of disaster restoration services, including water damage restoration, fire damage and smoke odor removal, asbestos abatement, and spill cleanup, as well as virus and bacteria disinfection and property rebuilding.

ITS Environmental Services is a comprehensive disaster restoration and extreme cleanup service provider with more than ten years of experience serving the New York, Long Island, and Tri-State region. The company is licensed, insured, and certified, and provides environmental restoration, biohazard cleaning, disinfection, and property restoration services. Its work spans crime scene cleanup, unattended death cleanup, blood cleanup, suicide cleanup, hoarder cleaning, and extreme cleaning, alongside pack out, moving, and storage support for property owners managing the aftermath of unexpected events.
