

RedFlame Digital Completes Website Design Project for J&J Treewackers

October 16, 2026

Roanoke, Virginia - October 16, 2026 -
RedFlame Digital, a marketing agency in Roanoke, Virginia, has completed a website design project for J&J Treewackers, a tree service that works across the Roanoke Valley. The new site at jjtreewackers.com went live in September 2026. RedFlame Digital built the company's first website a few years ago, and the new build continues that working relationship.

The finished site is listed among the client sites shown under website design by RedFlame Digital on the agency's own website, where it is described as a Roanoke tree service site that gives homeowners one place to ask for a quote.

J&J Treewackers is owned by Jeff, Jerry and Garth and runs its crew out of Moneta, Virginia. It offers tree removal, tree trimming and pruning, stump removal, emergency tree service and tree risk assessment for residential and commercial customers.

The site is organized around those five services. Each one appears in the main menu and again in the footer, and the homepage gives every service its own short section with a heading, a plain description of the job and a link to that service. The main navigation also carries Service Area, The Outfit, Guides and Contact.

The three owners are introduced in a section directly after the opening screen. Further down, a three-step section outlines how a job moves from a first call or a set of photos of the tree through to cleanup.

Photographs of finished work get their own section. A recent-jobs gallery labels each image with the type of job and adds a one-line caption, such as a dead hardwood taken down in sections over a brick ranch, a storm-uprooted trunk resting against a house and logs and brush loaded out before the crew leaves. Another section sets out the crew's equipment in a table, with columns for what each piece does and where it is used.

A question-and-answer section covers estimates, scheduling, what a homeowner should have ready before a visit, access to steep or tight lots and what happens to the wood once a tree is down. A longer section lists situations that lead a Roanoke homeowner to call a tree service, along with questions to ask one before a job is booked.

Local coverage is split by town. A section on the homepage links to Roanoke, Salem and Moneta tree care pages, and the footer repeats those three towns under the heading Where the crew works.

Contact options repeat throughout the homepage. The phone number is in the header and the menu and appears beside the estimate buttons in several sections. The estimate form asks for a name, phone number and property address, with email optional, then the service needed from a list of the five and a short description of what is going on with the tree. A note under the form tells visitors to call instead if a tree is on the house or in the road. If a submission does not go through, the form says so and shows the phone number.

The footer carries the company's contact details, the service and service-area links, links to its Media & Press and Brand Profile pages, and a credit line naming RedFlame Digital. This release describes the site as published and reports no traffic, ranking or lead figures.

RedFlame Digital is a marketing agency based in Roanoke, Virginia. Most of its client work, including website design, is for local businesses in legal, medical and home service fields. RedFlame Digital is the trade name of TJG Web Design.
