Oasis Center Expands Addiction Treatment Access With Flexible Outpatient and Dual Diagnosis Programs

October 05, 2026

NEW YORK, NY - October 05, 2026 -

Oasis Center, a private addiction treatment facility in Manhattan, has highlighted the continued availability of its flexible outpatient services and integrated mental health care as demand for accessible recovery options rises across New York City. The facility operates a confidential helpline around the clock, offering individuals struggling with drug and alcohol addiction a direct path to assessment and care.

The facility provides a full continuum of services, ranging from medically supervised detox to residential inpatient rehab, partial hospitalization, and ongoing outpatient care. Among these offerings, the Oasis addiction center outpatient program allows patients to continue working or caring for their families while receiving structured treatment, a model suited to individuals with a strong support system at home who require less intensive clinical oversight.

The center has earned consistent five-star feedback from individuals who have completed its programs, with reviews reflecting the clinical team's attention to patient dignity and evidence-based methods. One such review can be found among the facility's published patient accounts, which describe experiences across detox, outpatient, and dual diagnosis services.

"Recovery looks different for every individual, and access to the right level of care at the right time makes a measurable difference," said a spokesperson for Oasis Center. "The goal is to meet people where they are, whether that means intensive residential support or an outpatient schedule that fits around daily responsibilities."

For individuals facing both substance use disorders and co-occurring mental health conditions, the Oasis addiction center's dual diagnosis treatment delivers integrated care that addresses addiction and underlying psychological concerns simultaneously. This approach reflects a broader movement within the treatment community toward comprehensive care that considers the full clinical picture rather than treating conditions in isolation.

The facility's Intensive Outpatient Program offers more than nine hours of therapy each week, including evening sessions designed for individuals who need more structure than standard outpatient care but do not require residential placement. The center also operates a Medication-Assisted Treatment program that combines FDA-approved medications with counseling to help patients manage cravings and reduce the risk of relapse.

"The strength of a treatment center is reflected in the experiences of the people it serves," the spokesperson added. "Feedback from former patients continues to guide how services are delivered and refined over time."

Oasis Center provides free confidential assessments, including same-day evaluations, and accepts most major commercial insurance plans. The clinical team remains available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, and every person who seeks help is treated with respect and dignity throughout the process.

Oasis Center is a private addiction treatment facility located in Manhattan, New York City. The center offers medical detox, residential inpatient rehab, partial hospitalization, intensive outpatient care, standard outpatient services, medication-assisted treatment, and dual diagnosis care for co-occurring mental health conditions.
