Law Office of Brian T. Richards Expands Immigration Services

October 02, 2026

LANSING, MI - October 02, 2026 -
The Law Office of Brian T. Richards has announced the launch of an expanded range of immigration legal services for individuals and families in Lansing, Michigan, and surrounding communities. The new service offerings address a broader range of immigration-related legal matters and are intended to provide information and legal assistance for people navigating federal immigration procedures. The expansion adds to the firm?s existing legal services and includes a focus on immigration in Lansing, MI.

The newly expanded services cover several areas of immigration law that can affect individuals and families at different stages of the immigration process. These matters include family-based visas, green card applications, naturalization, and defense in removal proceedings. Because immigration cases can involve different requirements and procedures depending on an individual?s circumstances, legal representation may involve reviewing relevant information and identifying the applicable legal process.

The announcement comes as immigration law continues to change through updates to federal rules, procedures, and administrative practices. Changes in immigration requirements can affect how applications and other legal matters are prepared and handled. The Law Office of Brian T. Richards has identified staying current with these developments as an important part of its expanded service approach. The firm?s new offerings are intended to address the legal needs of people seeking information about their available immigration options.

Personalized consultations are also included as part of the firm?s approach to immigration matters. Individual cases can differ based on factors such as family circumstances, immigration history, documentation, and the specific type of application or proceeding involved. Reviewing these details can help establish which legal procedures may apply to a particular situation. The Law Office of Brian T. Richards plans to use consultations to better understand individual circumstances before determining the appropriate legal services.

The firm is also expanding its public information efforts through a new blog and related online resources. The materials are intended to provide general information about immigration law, procedural developments, and topics that may be relevant to individuals considering immigration-related legal matters. Regularly updated educational content can give community members an additional source of general legal information when researching federal immigration processes. The firm?s online resources will complement its direct legal services and consultations.

Community education is another part of the initiative announced by the Law Office of Brian T. Richards. The firm plans to host informational workshops and seminars in Lansing, Michigan, addressing general aspects of the immigration process. These events are expected to provide opportunities for community members to learn about legal procedures and ask questions about topics covered during the sessions. The educational program is intended to make information about immigration law more accessible to people seeking a clearer understanding of the process.

The planned workshops will address general legal concepts rather than relying on a single approach for every situation. Immigration matters can vary substantially based on the circumstances of the individuals involved, making general education useful as an introduction but not a substitute for case-specific legal analysis. The firm?s combination of informational resources, workshops, and consultations reflects an effort to provide information at several points in the process. Details about upcoming educational events are expected to be shared through the firm?s regular communications.

The expansion also reflects the range of legal matters that can arise during different stages of an immigration case. Family-based immigration may involve applications connected to relatives, while naturalization involves a separate legal process for eligible individuals seeking U.S. citizenship. Other matters can involve applications for permanent residence or legal representation during removal proceedings. The Law Office of Brian T. Richards has expanded its services to address these different categories within its immigration practice.

For individuals researching immigration in Lansing, MI, the expanded services provide access to legal assistance covering several common areas of immigration law. The firm has indicated that each matter will be reviewed according to the circumstances and legal issues involved. Information about the expanded services, consultations, educational resources, and upcoming workshops is available through the Law Office of Brian T. Richards.

The launch marks an expansion of the Law Office of Brian T. Richards? immigration-related legal services in the Lansing area. Alongside direct legal consultations, the firm plans to continue developing informational resources and community education opportunities related to immigration law. The initiative is intended to provide additional avenues for individuals and families to obtain general information and legal assistance as they navigate immigration procedures. Further details about the firm and its expanded services are available through its regular business communications and website.
