October 06, 2026 -

Western Pacific Fence announces the availability of custom animal fencing for residential properties throughout Western Washington. The company's services cover new fence design and installation, repair and replacement of existing animal fences, regular maintenance, and post-installation maintenance advice for projects involving pet containment and wildlife exclusion.

The residential offering includes fences intended to keep pets within property boundaries and restrict wildlife access to yards, gardens, and landscaping. Custom animal fence designs are available for property owners seeking fence builders in Bellevue, WA. The work addresses the property's animal-related requirements, with the purpose of the enclosure guiding the design of the requested fencing.

Western Pacific Fence provides initial consultations before installation to discuss the project and the property's needs. These discussions connect the intended use of the fence with the company's custom design and installation services. A residential project may involve keeping pets in a designated outdoor area, protecting planted spaces from animals, or addressing both containment and exclusion within the same property.

Custom design is part of the animal fencing offering, allowing projects to reflect the property's specific requirements. The company's services address animal-related needs within residential outdoor spaces, including property boundaries and areas used for gardens or landscaping. The intended function remains central to the project, whether the fence is being installed to contain pets or to restrict animal access.

Repair and replacement are available for existing animal fences, extending the service scope to properties that already have an enclosure. A request involving an existing fence can be discussed with Western Pacific Fence alongside the property's containment or exclusion needs. The company provides both services within its animal fencing work, in addition to designing and installing new fences for residential projects.

Regular maintenance and post-installation advice are also part of the service offering. Maintenance is available for animal fencing, while advice after installation addresses the care of the completed fence. These services cover the period after installation and remain distinct from the initial design and construction work. Western Pacific Fence provides maintenance assistance as part of its ongoing animal fencing services.

Wildlife exclusion projects focus on limiting animal access to outdoor areas that property owners want to protect. Gardens and landscaping are among the spaces addressed by the company's animal fencing services. Pet containment projects serve a different purpose by enclosing areas intended for animals to use. Both applications fall within the custom animal fencing work available for residential properties.

Animal fencing can also address property needs related to local animal containment requirements. Western Pacific Fence provides custom designs and installation for the property's animal-related needs. Its residential services cover both new enclosures and animal fences already in use, with repair, replacement, and maintenance included alongside new installations. Initial consultations provide a point of contact for discussing those needs.

Western Pacific Fence has more than 20 years of experience serving Western Washington and is licensed, bonded, and insured. The company offers free estimates and one-year workmanship and manufacturer warranties. Residential animal fencing is part of its broader fence and gate installation business, which serves both residential and commercial properties throughout the region.

Custom animal fencing, repair, replacement, and maintenance are available through Western Pacific Fence for homeowners seeking fence builders in Bellevue, WA. Initial consultations provide an opportunity to discuss the requested work, including whether the project involves a new installation or an existing animal fence. The company also provides post-installation maintenance advice within its animal fencing services.
