

River Bluff Cabins Expands Lodging for Frio River Tubing

October 09, 2026

October 09, 2026 -

A recent addition to the accommodations available along the Frio River is providing travelers with another lodging option for outdoor recreation in the Texas Hill Country. River Bluff Cabins, a vacation property in Rio Frio, Texas, expanded its riverfront accommodations with Cabin 5, a three-bedroom, two-bathroom rental highlighted in a September 9, 2026, announcement. The addition accommodates families and groups planning Frio River tubing trips and other recreational activities in the surrounding region.

The property's newest cabin features approximately 1,100 square feet of living space and accommodates up to eight guests. Positioned along the river beneath mature cypress and live oak trees, the structure includes a large waterfront deck and private stairs leading toward the water. The accommodations feature two king beds, a full-size bunk bed, a furnished living area, and a kitchen equipped for preparing meals during extended stays.

The expanded lodging options reflect the practical considerations involved in organizing river vacations, particularly for families traveling with children or larger groups. Access to the river can influence accommodation decisions, while available cooking facilities and shared gathering spaces help visitors coordinate daily activities. The property's location also provides opportunities to experience the surrounding landscape without traveling extensively between recreational destinations.

River Bluff Cabins operates 16 rustic cabins alongside several larger lodging properties serving different group sizes. The accommodations are located along or within walking distance of the Frio River. Existing recreational facilities include an outdoor swimming pool, splash pad, playground, and communal gathering areas. These features provide alternatives when changing river conditions or weather patterns affect scheduled outdoor activities.

The property's event pavilion also supports organized gatherings, with space for up to 150 guests. Located near the river, the facility includes a functional kitchen, serving bar, sound system, two large televisions, and an outdoor deck. These arrangements accommodate family reunions, retreats, weddings, and other gatherings that require shared facilities in addition to overnight lodging.

For visitors interested in Frio River tubing, the location provides access to recreational opportunities throughout the Frio Canyon. The river is known for its limestone formations, cypress-lined banks, and sections used for floating, swimming, and kayaking. Water levels vary with rainfall and seasonal conditions, making it important for travelers to review current information before choosing routes or arranging equipment rentals.

The property also provides access to recreational supplies through its office store, including tubes and kayaks available for rental or purchase. Visitors planning river activities should consider appropriate flotation equipment, weather forecasts, and individual swimming abilities. Strong currents, shallow sections, and submerged obstacles can present hazards even in areas that appear calm.

Beyond river recreation, the surrounding area includes Garner State Park and Lost Maples State Natural Area. Both destinations provide opportunities for hiking, wildlife observation, and exploring the Texas Hill Country. These attractions allow visitors to organize flexible itineraries that combine water-based recreation with land-based activities, particularly during periods when floating conditions are unsuitable.

The September accommodation update also draws attention to the importance of advance planning for group travel. Larger parties often require arrangements for sleeping accommodations, meals, transportation, and shared activities. Having several lodging configurations within one property can simplify coordination while allowing participants to choose activities that reflect different interests and physical abilities.
