

Leo's Vacation Center Highlights Indoor Showroom for Fall RV Comparisons

October 13, 2026

GAMBRILLS, MD - October 13, 2026 -

Leo's Vacation Center is highlighting the role of its indoor showroom as fall weather patterns begin to affect outdoor shopping and fall RV trip planning. The family-owned dealership, which has operated since 1972, maintains a 12,000-square-foot indoor space devoted to recreational vehicles that allows side-by-side comparison of models regardless of rain or cooler temperatures.

The showroom is described on the company site as the largest indoor facility of its kind in Maryland. It displays a range of new and used units, including Class A, B, and C motorhomes, travel trailers, fifth wheels, toy haulers, and compact models from manufacturers such as Forest River RV, Keystone RV, and Thor Motor Coach. Customers can walk through floor plans and examine amenities without exposure to outdoor conditions. The dealership also operates a covered checkout area that supports delivery processes in variable weather.

Greg Merkel, Owner of Leo's Vacation Center, stated, "Cooler temperatures and shorter days in October shift how people evaluate vehicles. An indoor space lets them take the time to compare layouts and features without waiting for a clear day."

Qualifying purchases include a one-year Harvest Host membership, which provides access to unique overnight locations during travel. Transactions are structured without added fees for freight, documentation, or preparation, according to the dealership. The company maintains a substantial parts inventory that it characterizes as one of the largest in the region, supporting both new acquisitions and ongoing ownership needs. Certified technicians work in a separate 20,000-square-foot service and preparation area that handles inspections, appliance repairs, systems work, and related maintenance.

Merkel added, "The combination of an indoor display area and on-site service capacity means customers can address both selection and preparation questions in one visit. That arrangement has been part of operations for decades."

As fall travel continues for some owners and others begin planning for cooler-weather storage or limited use, the indoor showroom remains available for those comparing options. The dealership reports more than 54 years of continuous family ownership and cites more than 180 years of combined staff experience in recreational vehicle service. It identifies itself among the top 50 RV dealers in the United States and as the number one motorhome dealer in Maryland for 12 years, statements that appear on its own materials.

The service department performs Maryland State RV inspections for trailers and works on major brand appliances along with electrical, plumbing, LP, and brake systems. Extended service programs are available as an optional addition and are subject to their own terms. Sales representatives, many of whom own and use recreational vehicles, provide information on models suited to different travel patterns.

Leo's Vacation Center serves customers from across Maryland and neighboring states, focusing on creating positive experiences for families and individuals. Many transactions develop through referrals and repeat visits, according to the company. The indoor facility supports year-round activity while the expanded sales lot remains available for additional inventory, ensuring diverse options for various recreational needs.

Founded in 1972 and remaining under the same family ownership, Leo's Vacation Center functions as a full-service recreational vehicle dealership. It provides sales of new and used units, parts and accessories, and technical service under one operation. The company states that its mission is to supply knowledge and support in selecting a vehicle and to maintain a service commitment for the duration of ownership.
