

Bahr Dermatology Expands Cutting-Edge Skin Care in Utah

October 14, 2026

BOUNTIFUL, UT - October 14, 2026 -

Bahr Dermatology announced the operational expansion of its primary medical facility in Lehi, adding 2,400 square feet of clinical space, four fully equipped examination suites, and an advanced procedural wing to increase patient appointment availability by 40 percent. Beginning November 2, 2026, the updated facility will provide broader access to comprehensive diagnostic, therapeutic, and surgical skin care. Serving as an established dermatologist in Utah, the practice restructured its clinical scheduling framework to decrease new-patient appointment wait times across northern Utah County from seven weeks to under twelve business days. To support the increased patient volume, the clinic also added two certified medical assistants and a dedicated triage coordinator.

Under the direction of board-certified physician Dr. Kirby Bahr, the facility expansion incorporates specialized diagnostic instrumentation, including high-definition digital dermoscopy for automated mole mapping and quantitative lesion tracking. The practice also introduced two clinical modalities previously unavailable at the Lehi site: a 595-nanometer pulsed-dye vascular laser system and a narrow-band ultraviolet B (NB-UVB) phototherapy cabinet. The laser platform enables targeted management of erythematotelangiectatic rosacea, spider angiomas, and hypertrophic scars, while the phototherapy unit offers standardized light dosing for patients suffering from widespread plaque psoriasis, vitiligo, and refractory atopic dermatitis.

"This physical and technological expansion directly addresses an escalating demand for timely dermatological interventions in our region, where scheduling bottlenecks often delay critical medical care," said Dr. Kirby Bahr. "Skin diseases require structured diagnostic rigor and early intervention. By incorporating specialized surgical suites and calibrated therapeutic equipment, our clinical staff can conduct thorough assessments at the earliest signs of disease, initiate evidence-based therapeutic regimens, and monitor recovery patterns to reduce the risk of permanent tissue scarring or secondary systemic complications."

Prompt clinical evaluation is particularly critical given the high incidence of cutaneous malignancies across the Intermountain West. According to epidemiological surveillance published by the American Academy of Dermatology, approximately 9,500 people in the United States receive a skin cancer diagnosis every single day, and one in five Americans will develop skin cancer in their lifetime. Furthermore, over three million Americans undergo treatment for non-melanoma skin cancers annually. Utah consistently records some of the highest melanoma rates in the country, driven by high elevation, intense ultraviolet exposure, and active outdoor lifestyles. In response, Bahr Dermatology has implemented a daily urgent-access screening triage system reserved exclusively for rapid evaluations of atypical nevi and suspicious lesions requiring diagnostic biopsy.

In addition to medical and surgical dermatology, the expanded facility provides physician-directed aesthetic and corrective procedures. These supervised treatments include medical-grade chemical peels, microdermabrasion, and neuromodulator injections calibrated to manage photoaging, superficial facial rhytids, and residual acne scarring. To complement clinical care, the practice expanded its patient education program, publishing an algorithmic acne management guide detailing the systematic use of topical retinoids, systemic medications, and non-comedogenic skin-barrier restoration for adolescent and adult patients.

These operational advancements reflect the practice's focus on clinical precision, quantifiable patient access, and standardized healthcare delivery. Individuals seeking diagnostic consultations, preventive skin screenings, or an appointment with an experienced dermatologist in Utah can schedule visits through the administrative desk.
