ITS Environmental Services Highlights Round-the-Clock Blood Cleanup Service Across New York and Tri-State Area

October 28, 2026

YAPHANK, NY - October 28, 2026 -
ITS Environmental Services is reinforcing the availability of its 24-hour biohazard remediation response for residents and businesses throughout New York, Long Island, and the greater Tri-State region, where traumatic incidents often require immediate and professional attention.

Blood and bodily fluids present serious health risks due to potential bloodborne pathogens such as Hepatitis B and HIV. For this reason, the company continues to maintain trained technicians who are available at any hour to respond to severe injuries, violent incidents, unattended deaths, medical emergencies, and natural disasters. The ITS Environmental Services Blood Cleanup Service follows established safety protocols designed to protect property occupants and restore affected spaces to a safe, sanitary condition.

The company emphasizes that proper remediation extends well beyond ordinary cleaning. Technicians wear personal protective equipment and adhere to a structured process that includes securing the affected area, assessing contamination, containing spills, cleaning, disinfecting, and disposing of contaminated materials in accordance with regulatory requirements. A final inspection confirms that all traces of contamination have been addressed, and detailed documentation is maintained for compliance and reporting purposes.

"Families and property owners rarely expect to face a situation that requires biohazard remediation, and when it happens, timing and expertise matter a great deal," said Doug Baruchin, President of ITS Environmental Services. "Maintaining a response team that is ready at any hour across the New York and Tri-State area allows affected individuals to focus on what matters while trained professionals handle the hazardous work."

The company notes that many homeowner and business insurance policies cover the costs associated with this type of cleanup, which can reduce the financial burden on property owners during an already difficult time. ITS Environmental Services assists clients with insurance claims and documentation and provides a no-obligation inspection and estimate (within 30 miles of location) before any work begins.

"The physical hazards are only part of the situation," Baruchin added. "There is also an emotional toll that accompanies these events. Our approach always combines technical thoroughness with discretion and compassion for everyone involved."

Serving the region for more than fifteen years, ITS Environmental Services has structured its operations to address a wide spectrum of environmental restoration and remediation services. The ITS Environmental Services Blood Cleanup Service forms one component of a broader biohazard program that also encompasses crime scene cleanup, unattended death remediation, and extreme cleaning situations. The company holds credentials including IICRC and CEICR certifications and remains licensed and insured.

ITS Environmental Services provides biohazard cleanup, extreme cleanup services throughout New York and the Tri-State area. Services include crime scene cleanup, unattended death and blood cleanup and disinfection. The team is IICRC and CEICR certified, with over fifteen years of experience.
