Washington Eye Doctors? Dr. Jimmy Vo Earns Academy Fellowship

October 21, 2026

October 21, 2026 -

Washington Eye Doctors is proud to announce that Dr. Jimmy Vo has earned fellowship in the American Academy of Optometry, adding the FAAO designation to his professional credentials. The achievement recognizes his professional competence and reflects the practice?s commitment to thoughtful, personalized patient care for individuals and families throughout the Washington area.

FAAO stands for Fellow of the American Academy of Optometry. To earn this distinction, candidates must meet rigorous requirements that include evaluated written work and an oral examination. The process assesses professional knowledge and competence, giving patients a meaningful indication of a doctor?s commitment to development beyond the requirements for practicing optometry.

For patients unfamiliar with the designation, its significance lies in the work behind the letters. Fellowship involves demonstrating knowledge through a formal evaluation by professional peers. It represents an additional professional achievement for Dr. Vo and provides an opportunity for Washington Eye Doctors to explain why continued learning matters to its approach to care.

?Earning fellowship is a meaningful milestone in my career, but the motivation behind it comes back to my patients,? said Dr. Vo. ?I want to keep learning, asking questions, and strengthening the knowledge I bring to every appointment. It is a privilege to put that commitment into practice for the families who trust me with their care.?

Dr. Vo earned his Doctor of Optometry degree at Nova Southeastern University College of Optometry, where he also completed a primary care residency with an emphasis in pediatrics and binocular vision. His clinical interests include children?s eye care, myopia management, double vision and contact lenses.

His residency included advanced education in pediatric eye diseases, double vision management, myopia control, sports vision, concussions and traumatic brain injuries. That background informs his interest in the ways vision affects patients at different ages and during everyday activities, from classroom learning to work and recreation.

At Washington Eye Doctors, Dr. Vo brings a warm, individualized approach to caring for patients in downtown Washington and Arlington-Ballston, Virginia. His fellowship adds to a foundation of advanced training and a focus on understanding each patient?s visual needs, daily activities and concerns.

Beyond the exam room, Dr. Vo participates in community vision screenings and church-run charity events. His community involvement complements a professional approach centered on personal connection, particularly when working with children and families.

The achievement also reflects Washington Eye Doctors? broader commitment to combining clinical knowledge with personal attention. As a locally owned, family-owned practice, Washington Eye Doctors emphasizes lasting patient relationships, thorough eye care and recommendations tailored to the individual.

?We are proud to celebrate Dr. Vo and the dedication this achievement represents,? said Dr. Michael P. Rosenblatt of Washington Eye Doctors. ?His curiosity, compassion, and commitment to continued learning reflect the values we want every patient to experience in our offices.?

For the practice?s downtown Washington community and the Arlington-Ballston community, the announcement offers a chance to learn more about a local provider and the professional standards behind his new credentials. Washington Eye Doctors invites patients and neighbors to join in congratulating Dr. Vo on this milestone.
