

Harmony and Healing Draws Media Attention for Live Music Performances at VA Hospitals

November 23, 2026

San Ramon, California - November 23, 2026 -
Harmony and Healing, a San Francisco Bay Area charity that brings free live professional music into healthcare settings, has been featured by NBC Bay Area, KCRA, and Diablo Magazine for its work serving patients, including veterans gathered in community spaces at VA hospitals across the region.

The coverage highlights a program that places professional musicians in common and community spaces where groups of patients, often 20 or more at a time, gather for shared performances. At VA hospitals, these group concerts reach veterans of all ages, providing a shared musical experience in a communal setting rather than individual sessions.

Founded in 2019 by David Victor, former guitarist and co-lead vocalist of the multiplatinum band BOSTON, Harmony and Healing operates as a 501(c)(3) nonprofit. The organization provides its performances entirely free of charge to facilities and patients, supported by corporate donations, private donations, and planned giving. In addition to VA hospitals, the group serves hospice facilities, rehabilitation centers, memory care communities, and cancer support groups, serving all ages from pediatric units to senior memory care. Some visits are also conducted virtually via Zoom.

"Recognition from NBC Bay Area, KCRA, and Diablo Magazine helps bring attention to the role live music can play in healthcare environments," said David Victor, Founder and Executive Director of Harmony and Healing. "When musicians perform for a group of veterans in a common space, the experience is shared. Patients connect with the music and with one another, and that sense of community is part of what the work is about."

The media attention comes as the organization continues expanding its presence in healthcare facilities throughout the Bay Area. Performances are designed for groups of patients in shared settings, an approach that distinguishes the program from one-on-one visits and allows a single performance to reach many people at once.

Harmony and Healing works with professional musicians who have access to high-quality studio resources and experience performing for diverse audiences. The organization matches artists with facilities to schedule performances at times convenient for patients and caretakers.

"Veterans have given a great deal, and a live performance in a community space is one way to acknowledge that," Victor said. "The featured coverage reflects a growing understanding of how music fits into care settings alongside clinical treatment."

The Harmony and Healing nonprofit also hosts an annual Benefit Concert and Fundraiser to support its programming, along with a Private Benefit Concert fundraising program featuring the band Tha Therapy Dawgs. Proceeds help sustain the free performances offered to facilities and patients.
