

Better Builders Highlights Design-Build Approach for Bathroom Remodeling and Whole-Home Projects

November 02, 2026

SEATTLE, WA - November 02, 2026 -
Better Builders, a design-build remodeling contractor serving the Seattle metro area, has outlined the structured process it uses to guide homeowners through renovation projects, from initial concept to completed construction. The company's design-build model integrates planning, design, and construction under a single team, a method intended to reduce handoffs and keep projects aligned with homeowner expectations.

With more than 35 years of remodeling experience, Better Builders applies a three-stage process it describes as Discover, Design, and Build. The Discover stage focuses on understanding a homeowner's needs and goals for a space. The Design stage translates those goals into a plan, and the Build stage carries out the construction. The approach applies across the company's range of home renovation services, which include kitchen and bathroom remodels, home additions, basement conversions, and whole-house projects.

Better Builders' bathroom remodeling continues to rank among the most requested projects in residential renovation, as homeowners look to update aging spaces and improve everyday functionality. Better Builders addresses these projects through the same Better Builders design-build remodeling framework it applies to larger undertakings, with details available on their website.

"Homeowners often tell us the hardest part of a renovation is coordinating between designers and builders who do not communicate," said Pete Baughman, a representative of Better Builders. "The design-build approach keeps everyone on the same team from the first conversation through the final walkthrough, which helps projects stay on track and reflect what the homeowner actually wanted."

The company serves communities throughout the Seattle metro region, including Ballard, Bellevue, Bothell, Issaquah, Kirkland, Mercer Island, Redmond, Renton, Sammamish, Seattle, Shoreline, and Woodinville. In addition to remodeling work, Better Builders operates as a custom home builder, working with clients who want a residence designed around their specific needs and preferences rather than an existing floor plan.

Better Builders in Seattle, WA, also emphasizes sustainable building practices as a member of Built Green, incorporating eco-friendly products and methods into its projects. The company backs completed work with a five-year craftsmanship warranty that extends beyond common industry standards.

"A renovation is a significant investment, and the results need to last," Baughman said. "The warranty reflects a long-term commitment to the quality of the work, not just the appearance of a finished space on the day the project wraps up."

The company's portfolio spans a broad set of project types, including whole-house remodels, kitchen and bathroom renovations, accessory dwelling units, outdoor living spaces, sunrooms, and aging-in-place modifications. Case studies of completed projects illustrate how the design-build process has been applied to different homes and budgets across the region.

Better Builders is a home construction and renovation contractor based in the Seattle metro area. Drawing on more than three decades of experience, the company provides design-build remodeling and custom home construction services to homeowners throughout the region, with a focus on quality craftsmanship, sustainable methods, and lasting value.
