

Positive Group LLC Shares Guidance on Dating With an STD and Reducing Stigma

October 23, 2026

Chicago, Illinois - October 23, 2026 -

Positive Group LLC, the company behind the Meet Positives platform, has published new guidance addressing the practical and emotional challenges of dating while living with a sexually transmitted disease. The guidance arrives as conversations about sexual health continue to evolve and as many singles report hesitation about entering relationships due to concerns over disclosure and judgment.

The guidance centers on how individuals can approach dating with confidence despite STD stigma, which remains a persistent barrier even as medical treatments have advanced. According to Positive Group LLC, social attitudes have not always kept pace with medical progress, leaving many people fearful of rejection, anxious about disclosure, and vulnerable to feelings of shame or isolation.

The company identifies several common factors that sustain negative attitudes, including limited public education, longstanding cultural and social assumptions, inaccurate media portrayals, and fear of the unknown. These factors, the company notes, often lead people to delay or avoid relationships altogether rather than face potential reactions from prospective partners.

The newly outlined approach encourages individuals to educate themselves about their condition, challenge negative self-talk, choose an appropriate time for disclosure, focus on medical facts rather than fear, and build a network of supportive people. The company emphasizes that an honest conversation, grounded in accurate information, can ease anxiety for both partners and support stronger connections.

Task added that community plays a central role in easing those concerns. "When people connect with others who understand the same struggles, the sense of isolation begins to fade," he said. "A supportive environment allows individuals to focus on compatibility and shared values rather than on explaining or defending a diagnosis."

The Meet Positives platform serves as a resource for dating with an STD, providing a space where positive singles can meet others who have faced similar circumstances. The platform includes a matching system that pairs members by shared condition, distance, and personal criteria, along with discussion forums where members can share stories and information. It also offers dating tips, condition guides, and community stories through its blog.

Michael Task, a spokesperson for Positive Group LLC, said the guidance reflects what members have long expressed about their experiences. "People living with an STD often tell us that the hardest part of dating is not the condition itself but the fear of how others will respond," Task said. "The aim is to replace that fear with facts and to show that meaningful relationships remain fully within reach."

The Meet Positives STD dating website operates across devices and is accompanied by a mobile application available on major app stores, with international versions serving several countries. The company notes that its content is intended for general purposes and does not constitute medical advice, and that the platform is available to users aged 18 and above.

Positive Group LLC operates Meet Positives, a dating platform designed specifically for individuals living with sexually transmitted diseases. The company focuses on creating a safe and supportive environment where positive singles can connect, share experiences, and pursue meaningful relationships while reducing the barriers that stigma can create.
