STT Security Services Details Client Continuity Following SEC and SEC SHIELD Affiliation

October 27, 2026

MT. PLEASANT, MI - October 27, 2026 -
STT Security Services has confirmed its affiliation with Secure Environment Consultants and SEC SHIELD, describing the development as an organizational relationship that combines STT's established local service with additional resources, training, and security expertise. In announcements published through the companies' official LinkedIn accounts, the organizations stated that existing STT clients could continue working with familiar teams while gaining access to broader organizational capabilities.

The announcement identifies continuity of client support as a central element of the arrangement. STT Security Services said that its existing client relationships would remain supported by the teams customers already know, while the wider organization would provide additional resources and capabilities. The companies have not published a detailed schedule of operational changes, new service launches, staffing adjustments, or revised security procedures connected with the affiliation. The available information therefore establishes the stated direction of the relationship without suggesting that individual client arrangements have been altered.

The companies describe the affiliation as bringing STT's local operational experience together with Secure Environment Consultants' work in security planning, preparedness, and professional training. Secure Environment Consultants identifies site assessments, emergency preparedness planning, and critical incident response training among its areas of expertise. STT, meanwhile, provides security personnel, investigative services, training, and consulting for organizations operating in a range of commercial and specialized environments. These published areas of work provide context for the announcement's reference to broader resources and training, although the companies have not outlined a specific integration plan or identified new capabilities assigned to individual STT accounts.

For security clients, the distinction between continued service and organizational development is important. Security assignments depend on site-specific requirements, established responsibilities, personnel training, reporting expectations, and communication with client representatives. Changes at the organizational level do not, by themselves, establish that those operational arrangements have changed. STT's announcement emphasizes continuity through existing teams, while the broader affiliation is described as providing access to additional resources. Further details about any assignment-specific changes would need to be confirmed directly by the companies.

The official announcement stated that STT clients could expect ?the exact same continued support from the teams you know, now backed by expanded resources, training, and capabilities.? That statement identifies the intended balance between maintaining existing client support and drawing on the broader organization. The companies have not published quantified measures of the resources being added, a timetable for integration, or performance figures demonstrating the effect of the affiliation.

STT Security Services has operated since 1973 and has developed services across security operations and related investigative and training functions. The company's published service descriptions include unarmed security personnel, access control, patrols, camera monitoring, reporting, and de-escalation. Its investigations and consulting activities address a range of client needs, while its training covers communication, legal matters, patrol techniques, emergency situations, and site-specific procedures. These existing capabilities establish the operational context for the company's continued work following the affiliation.

Secure Environment Consultants describes its work as helping organizations prepare for and respond to critical incidents through site assessment, preparedness planning, and training. The combination described in the affiliation announcement connects these areas with STT's existing security operations. The companies have not stated that all services are being combined into a single operating model, nor have they published new service names, revised contract structures, or new geographic coverage arrangements. The scope of the relationship should therefore be understood through the companies' official descriptions rather than assumptions about how their services may be integrated.

The announcement does not classify the arrangement as an acquisition or merger and does not provide financial terms, ownership details, an exact effective date, or a formal integration schedule. It uses the language of joining the Secure Environment Consultants and SEC SHIELD organization and emphasizes client support, additional resources, and continued work to protect people, property, and communities. That description provides a factual basis for reporting the affiliation while leaving its legal structure and detailed implementation unspecified.

STT Security Services is a privately owned security provider founded in 1973. The company provides security, investigative, training, and consulting services to clients across the United States. Secure Environment Consultants provides security assessments, preparedness planning, and critical incident response training, while SEC SHIELD is part of the broader organization named in the affiliation announcement.
