

Booklet Printing and Binding Offered for Schools and Corporate Teams

November 04, 2026

IRVINE, CA - November 04, 2026 -
Main Graphics is printing and binding booklets, catalogs and training manuals for schools, corporate teams and nonprofit organizations from its print shop in Irvine, California. The company handles printing, collating, folding and binding in-house.

Printed booklets remain common for employee handbooks, training materials, event programs, school directories and product catalogs, particularly where readers need something to take notes in or keep on a desk. Organizations often need these on a deadline tied to an event, a semester or a sales season.

"We print a lot of programs for conferences and graduations where the date cannot move," said George, owner of Main Graphics. "Keeping the binding in-house means we are not waiting on another shop when the clock is running."

The company's booklet printing service produces saddle-stitched booklets for programs, newsletters and short manuals, in full color or black and white, with options for cover stock and finish.

Thicker documents are produced through the shop's book binding service, which includes spiral, wire-O and perfect binding for handbooks, training binders and reference guides that need to lie flat or hold up to frequent use.

Businesses that sell physical products can order catalog printing with full-color pages, which are used for trade shows, showrooms and direct mail to existing customers.

"Binding style changes how people use a book," George said. "A training manual that lies flat on a desk gets used. One that keeps closing on itself ends up in a drawer."

Proofs are provided before production, and the company can help customers choose paper weights and binding methods based on page count and how the document will be used.

Tabs, dividers, laminated covers and clear front sheets can be added to manuals and binders that will be handled often, such as safety guides and reference books kept on job sites or in break rooms.

Short runs and reprints are available for organizations that update materials often, allowing them to print smaller quantities instead of storing large stocks of outdated booklets.

Files can be supplied by customers or prepared by the company's design team, which can lay out text and images for print.

Schools, businesses and organizations throughout Orange County can request quotes through the Main Graphics website or by phone.
