

Demand For Air Conditioning Repair Rises In Houston, TX, In The Heat Of The Summer

June 30, 2016

June 30, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

AC Man Houston, an HVAC repair company in Houston, TX, has noted that the demand for air conditioning repair has been rising and announced that they now offer emergency repair services. The company has observed that Houston is starting to heat up now that summer is well on the way. Many people have started switching on their air conditioning in order to cope with the temperatures that are reaching uncomfortable levels. However, as is common at this time of year, many residents have noticed that their air conditioning equipment is not working properly. The company would like to remind residents that they can be contacted through their website at <https://www.acmanhouston.com>.

Don from AC Man Houston says: "Every year, when it starts to get hot, we see a huge surge in demand for our repair services. The units haven't been used for many months, and many people forget about maintenance as well. But now that temperatures are going up, people are suddenly finding themselves stuck with the sweltering heat. We are there to help people repair their air conditioning systems so that they can be comfortable again."

While some people see air conditioning as a luxury item, it is actually a life saving tool. This is particularly true in the elderly, young, ill, and infirm. In fact, recently, a young boy died from heat exhaustion, while he was in a vehicle where the air conditioning was not turned on. Last year, several elderly people died in their homes because their air conditioning did not work. AC Man Houston aims to make sure these types of situations will never have to occur again.

With the Heat Emergency Plan now instated in Houston, demand for the AC Man's repair services are increasing even further. They are one of the area's respected companies, receiving many positive reviews on <https://www.facebook.com/ACManHouston/>. "Called late and came out ASAP," says Elisa H.M. "Fixed our A/C right away!"

AC Man Houston is also encouraging all Houston residents to follow them on Twitter at <https://twitter.com/acmanhouston>. They regularly share news through that channel relating to the weather and the Heat Emergency Plan, which has now has just been activated. Anyone who finds that an AC unit is not working is encouraged to contact them as soon as possible.
