

JTI Grading LLC Expands Hardscaping Services

October 30, 2026

CATAWBA, NC - October 30, 2026 -

JTI Grading LLC, a hardscape contractor in Lake Norman of Catawba, NC, has announced an expansion of its outdoor improvement services for residential and commercial properties. The expanded offerings include custom patio and walkway installations, retaining walls, and water feature designs. The announcement reflects the company's continued development within the local hardscaping industry and its focus on providing a broader range of outdoor construction options.

The expanded services are intended to address the different needs of property owners looking to improve the functionality and appearance of their outdoor spaces. Patios and walkways can help create more usable areas for everyday activities, while retaining walls can assist with managing changes in elevation and supporting landscape layouts. Water features also provide additional design possibilities for properties incorporating outdoor gathering areas or decorative landscape elements.

Through its expanded service offerings, JTI Grading LLC will provide hardscaping options that can be adapted to individual property layouts and project requirements. The company plans to approach projects based on factors such as available space, intended use, material preferences, and the overall landscape design. These considerations can help determine the appropriate features and construction methods for each outdoor improvement project.

The expansion comes as outdoor living spaces continue to play a role in residential property improvements. Homeowners and commercial property managers may consider hardscaping projects to improve accessibility, organize outdoor areas, or create spaces for recreation and gatherings. Features such as walkways, patios, and retaining walls can serve practical purposes while contributing to the overall design of a property.

JTI Grading LLC brings more than a decade of experience to its work in the hardscaping field. Its project experience includes a range of outdoor improvement needs, supporting the company's continued efforts to develop its services. The expanded offerings provide additional options for property owners seeking coordinated outdoor improvements through a single contractor.

Material selection and construction planning remain important aspects of hardscaping projects. The durability and performance of outdoor features can depend on site conditions, drainage, preparation, and the materials selected for installation. Retaining walls, in particular, may require careful planning based on soil conditions, elevation changes, and water management needs. These project considerations can influence both the construction process and the long-term maintenance requirements of finished outdoor spaces.

JTI Grading LLC has also identified sustainability as an area of focus within its operations. The company emphasizes consideration of environmental impacts, material selection, and construction practices when planning outdoor projects. Depending on site conditions and project requirements, responsible planning can help address drainage, reduce unnecessary material waste, and support the long-term performance of installed features.

In addition to its service expansion, JTI Grading LLC plans to provide educational resources for property owners interested in learning more about hardscaping. The planned materials will cover topics such as outdoor space planning, routine maintenance, material selection, and considerations for improving the usability of residential and commercial landscapes. These resources are intended to help property owners better understand common project considerations and prepare for future outdoor improvements.

The company's development also reflects the role local contractors play in supporting property improvement activity throughout the region. Hardscaping projects can involve material suppliers, equipment providers, and other service professionals, creating connections across related industries. As JTI Grading LLC continues to expand its offerings, its work will remain focused on outdoor construction and landscape improvement needs in its service area.

As a hardscape contractor in Lake Norman of Catawba, NC, JTI Grading LLC continues to develop services designed to accommodate a variety of residential and commercial projects. The expanded offerings establish additional options for property owners considering patios, walkways, retaining walls, and water features as part of their outdoor improvement plans.

Additional information about the company's services and project inquiries is available through JTI Grading LLC's website and customer service team. Property owners can use these resources to discuss project needs, request information, and explore potential improvements based on their property's layout and intended use.
