Cestari Highlights Ultimate Pasta Machine as Families Prepare Holiday Meals

November 03, 2026

LITTLETON, MA - November 03, 2026 -
As households across the country plan traditional holiday dishes ranging from Christmas Eve ravioli to layered lasagna, Cestari is drawing attention to its Ultimate Pasta Machine and the role fresh pasta making tools play in seasonal family cooking. The machine, available direct from the company and through Walmart, is designed to simplify the process of rolling and cutting dough during one of the busiest cooking periods of the year.

The Cestari Ultimate Pasta Machine features a patented suction base, allowing it to stay in place without a separate clamp or a counter edge for mounting. This design distinguishes it from traditional models that require a table lip or screw attachment. As a pasta machine with suction base, the unit can be positioned on most flat kitchen surfaces, including islands and central work areas where many families gather during holiday preparation.

The machine includes a stainless steel 150 mm roller, a cutter attachment, and a hand crank. These components support the full process of turning dough into sheets and then into cut pasta shapes. The absence of a clamp addresses a common limitation for households without a suitable counter edge, a factor that has historically restricted where pasta making can take place in a home kitchen.

"Fresh pasta is tied to memory and tradition in many families, and the holidays are often when those traditions come alive," said Susan MacDowell, spokesperson for Cestari. "The suction base was developed to remove a practical barrier. People should be able to make pasta on the surface that works for their kitchen, rather than rearranging a gathering around where a clamp will fit."

Making fresh pasta during the holidays is a long-standing custom in many cultures, particularly for dishes that call for thin, uniform sheets of dough. Rolling pasta by hand can be time-consuming, and inconsistent thickness can affect how dishes such as ravioli and lasagna cook. A machine-based approach allows for repeatable results, which can be useful when preparing larger quantities for extended family meals.

"The goal is to make a shared activity easier rather than more complicated," MacDowell added. "When the equipment stays put and the steps are straightforward, more members of a family can take part, including children and relatives who are new to the tradition."

The Ultimate Pasta Machine joins a broader catalog of kitchen products offered by Cestari. The company produces a range of tools intended for everyday cooking and food preparation, each backed by a lifetime guarantee. Cestari also maintains a warranty registration service, a blog, and a newsroom that share product information and cooking guidance throughout the year.
