Avasia, a business in Beaverton, OR, that provides a range of prenatal products through Amazon, has announced that customers will soon be able to purchase products directly from their website at <http://avasia.com>. The company supplies prenatal dietary supplements that are designed to nurture and nourish both the mother and the baby.

Natasha Avasia, owner and founder of Avasia, says: "Pregnancy is the most magical time during a woman's life. At Avasia, we are devoted to life. As such, we offer a prenatal vitamin, a prenatal organic whole food, and prenatal DHA. Up to now, we have only offered these products through our Amazon store, but we are in the process of updating our site so that it is able to have ecommerce facilities as well. This means that people will soon be able to purchase directly from our site as well."

Avasia would also like people to know that the website currently has a newsletter subscription option. By signing up to the newsletter, people will be the first to know once the products will be available directly from the site. Additionally, the company will update their Twitter feed at <https://twitter.com/AvasiaPrenatal>, to reflect the new feature of the site.

The Avasia products have been incredibly well received while they have been available through Amazon, receiving countless positive reviews. Many of these reviews have now also been highlighted on the Avasia website. "For me, the long and short of it is that I need to stick to a regime that includes DHA," says Heather P. "Not only does it help my brain and eyes, it has the ability to help my heart and that is extremely important. I am thankful to have learned that DHA can benefit both men and women; this is a product that I have shared with my husband as well. I have taken Omega-3 supplements in the past however, until recently I have been hard pressed to find a product that did not result in an upset stomach, fishy burping which can be rather embarrassing, and often a horrible aftertaste. In my experience, Avasia Prenatal DHA has proven to be a more 'user friendly' product."
