

Pro-Mow, Inc. Expands Seasonal Lawn Care Service and Shrub Maintenance Across Loudoun County Virginia

November 03, 2026

DULLES, VA - November 03, 2026 -
Pro-Mow, Inc., a lawn care company based in Dulles, has introduced a focused seasonal transition program designed to help residential and commercial properties prepare for the colder months ahead. The initiative combines professional lawn care with shrub maintenance to address the specific challenges that arrive as temperatures drop and growing seasons end.

The winter transition program responds to a period that lawn specialists consider critical for long-term turf health. As grass growth slows, falling leaves, soil compaction, and overgrown shrubs can create conditions that affect how lawns recover the following spring. The program from Pro-Mow Inc. in Loudoun County, Virginia, addresses these concerns through a combination of leaf removal, aeration, fertilization, and shrub care intended to protect properties through the dormant season.

Aeration remains a central element of the seasonal approach. The technique reduces soil compaction and thatch buildup, allowing water, air, and nutrients to reach grass roots more effectively. Paired with fertilization treatments that use organic products, the process is designed to strengthen root systems before the ground freezes. The company also provides leaf removal to keep outdoor spaces clear and to prevent matted debris from smothering turf.

Pro-Mow shrub maintenance has been added as a complementary service during the transition period. Trimming and shaping shrubs in late season helps maintain plant structure and appearance while reducing the risk of damage from winter weather. The combination of lawn and shrub attention reflects a broader approach to property care as the seasons change.

"The transition into winter is one of the most important times of year for a property, even though the lawn appears to go quiet," said Brian Gepford, General Manager at Pro-Mow, Inc. "The work done in late autumn determines how well a lawn holds up through the cold and how quickly it rebounds in spring. Timing matters, and that is why the company structures its seasonal services around the specific needs of each property."

The company serves properties throughout the region using what it describes as well-maintained equipment and environmentally conscious products. Services are scheduled around the natural rhythm of the seasons, with attention to the timing that lawn care specialists consider essential for healthy results.

"Shrub maintenance and lawn care work together during this season," Gepford added. "Addressing both at the same time gives properties a cleaner finish heading into winter and sets the stage for healthier growth once the weather warms again."

In addition to seasonal transition services, Pro-Mow, Inc. offers weekly lawn mowing, mulching, lawn fertilization, aeration, leaf removal, and summer lawn maintenance. The company works with a range of mulch options and organic treatments intended to support strong root growth and consistent turf health throughout the year.
