

Loan Origination Solutions Unveils Redesigned Website for Real Estate Investors

November 17, 2026

November 17, 2026 -
Loan Origination Solutions LLC has launched a redesigned website aimed at helping real estate investors explore financing information with greater ease. Developed by Code Charley, the updated site introduces modern styling, improved navigation, and mobile-friendly layouts that adapt to desktop, tablet, and phone screens.

The redesign reflects a continued focus on clarity and accessibility. The site now features cleaner typography, a clearer page hierarchy, and organized content blocks that allow visitors to locate information about loan programs without unnecessary complexity. Responsive layouts and scalable typography support a consistent browsing experience across devices.

The Loan Origination Solutions New Website Design places emphasis on usability and visual consistency. Reusable navigation patterns, structured content sections, and balanced spacing give the site a cohesive appearance while keeping the focus on the information itself. A press release archive within the site provides a central place for future announcements.

"The redesigned site was built to make financing information straightforward for real estate investors," said a spokesperson for Loan Origination Solutions. "The goal was to present loan program details in a clear and organized way, so visitors can understand their options and navigate the content without distraction."

The refreshed platform supports the full range of financing programs offered by the company. These include DSCR loans for rental properties, which focus on a property's rental income rather than the borrower's personal income, and rehab loans designed for investors purchasing and improving properties that require renovation. The company also provides fix-and-flip loans structured for short-term acquisition and resale projects, along with construction loans tied to the plans, budgets, and milestones of ground-up residential developments.

The new design organizes these programs so that investors can evaluate how each aligns with a specific property plan, timeline, and exit strategy. Educational content on the site addresses considerations such as leverage, cash flow, loan duration, and program requirements, giving visitors a structured path to understanding non-traditional financing solutions.

"Each financing program serves a different investment approach, and the updated layout reflects that," the spokesperson added. "Presenting the material in a lightweight and readable format helps investors compare programs and move forward with the information they need."

The Loan Origination Solutions Brand has long centered on simplifying the exploration of financial and property-related information. The website update extends that direction by pairing thoughtful content with a contemporary interface. Code Charley handled the design direction and front-end presentation, emphasizing readability and responsive performance throughout the project.

Loan Origination Solutions specializes in financing solutions tailored for real estate investors. The company offers a suite of loan programs that includes DSCR loans for rental properties, rehab loans for property renovation, fix-and-flip loans for purchase and resale, and construction loans for ground-up projects. Rather than relying on traditional owner-occupied mortgage criteria, the company structures its programs around the property and project types that define each investment strategy, providing support for rental acquisitions, renovations, resale projects, and new construction developments.
