Nova Warranty Expands Audi Extended Warranty Coverage for Out-of-Warranty Vehicles

November 10, 2026

WILMINGTON, DE - November 10, 2026 -
Nova Warranty has expanded its vehicle service program coverage for Audi owners whose factory warranties have expired, addressing a gap that leaves many drivers without protection against costly repairs.

Every new Audi arrives with a four-year or 50,000-mile New Vehicle Limited Warranty and four years of 24-hour roadside assistance. Manufacturer plans such as Audi Pure Protection can extend that coverage for up to ten years, but they must be purchased while the factory warranty remains active. Audi owners who miss that window have historically faced limited options once their original coverage lapses.

Nova Warranty, a direct administrator of vehicle service programs, now offers an Audi extended warranty designed specifically for vehicles that are already out of factory coverage. The company provides 24/7 agent support, flexible cancellation terms, and multi-car discounts for households with more than one vehicle.

The expanded coverage applies to popular Audi models including the A3, A4, Q5, Q8, A7, A8, and R8. Nova Warranty protection plans cover major vehicle systems such as the engine, transmission and trans-axle, drive axle, cooling system, clutch, steering system, brakes, turbos and superchargers, and hi-tech electronics. The plans also include 24-hour roadside assistance and courtesy towing.

Nova Warranty offers two tiers of coverage. The Nova Powertrain plan covers essential drivetrain components at a more accessible price point, while the Nova Superior plan provides broader protection spanning electrical systems, suspension, air conditioning and heating, and additional components.

"Many Audi owners do not realize that manufacturer extension plans must be purchased before the original warranty ends," said a spokesperson for Nova Warranty. "The goal is to give drivers whose factory coverage has already lapsed a straightforward path to protecting their vehicles against unexpected repair costs."

The company emphasizes transparent pricing and informs customers of coverage terms and costs before any commitment. A Nova Warranty review of the company's offerings published by AutoInsurance.com examined its plans, eligibility requirements, quote process, and claims handling, reflecting growing attention to the vehicle service program market for luxury and performance vehicles.

"Audi vehicles are engineered with advanced electronics and performance systems that can be expensive to repair after the factory period," the spokesperson added. "Clear coverage terms and daily agent availability help owners make informed decisions about continuing protection."

Nova Warranty notes that a vehicle service program is often referred to as an auto warranty or extended car warranty, but it is not a warranty. A vehicle service program is an agreement between the customer and the administrator that defines which repairs are covered. Nova Warranty is a direct administrator of these programs and does not sell warranties.

Nova Warranty specializes in vehicle service programs for luxury, exotic, and everyday vehicles. In addition to Audi, the company administers coverage for a wide range of manufacturers, including BMW, Jaguar, Lamborghini, Porsche, Mercedes-Benz, and others. The company focuses on comprehensive coverage, competitive pricing, and daily customer service for owners seeking protection beyond the factory period.
