Azalea Hospitality Releases Guide Detailing What 2027 Masters Tickets Cost

November 17, 2026

AUGUSTA, GA - November 17, 2026 -
Azalea Hospitality has published a comprehensive travel planning guide that outlines the full range of expenses associated with attending the 2027 Masters Tournament at Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Georgia. The guide addresses a common point of uncertainty for golf fans by breaking down ticket prices alongside accommodation, transportation, and related travel costs for the annual championship.

The resource arrives as planning begins for the 2027 tournament, a period when many prospective attendees start researching the overall investment required to visit one of golf's most recognized events. According to the company, the guide was developed to give travelers a clearer understanding of the total budget involved rather than focusing solely on the admission price.

The guide reviews the different categories of masters tickets available, including ticket-only options, VIP arrangements, and corporate packages that combine admission to private housing near the course. By presenting these categories together, the document helps readers compare how various choices affect the total cost of a trip to Augusta.

Azalea Hospitality specializes in ticketing and hospitality services for major golf events, and the company compiled the guide using its experience arranging travel for past tournaments. The breakdown covers factors that influence pricing, such as the day of attendance, the level of hospitality selected, and lodging demand during tournament week.

"Many people who want tickets to the masters are surprised by how much the surrounding travel expenses contribute to the overall budget," said a spokesperson for Azalea Hospitality. "The guide was created to lay out those numbers in one place so that attendees can plan with realistic expectations before they commit."

The document also addresses the broader logistics of a tournament visit, including the timing of arrivals, the range of housing available in and around Augusta, and the trade-offs between different package types. Azalea Hospitality noted that early planning tends to give travelers more flexibility, particularly for those seeking combined ticket and accommodation arrangements.

"Understanding what tickets cost is only the starting point," the spokesperson added. "The aim of this guide is to help golf fans see the complete picture so they can make informed decisions well ahead of tournament week."

Beyond the Masters, Azalea Hospitality provides ticketing and hospitality services for other major golf championships, including the PGA Championship, The Open, and The Ryder Cup. The company also assists ticket holders who wish to sell their admissions and offers a selection of golf memorabilia related to the sport's history.

Azalea Hospitality is a company that arranges tickets, hospitality, masters golf packages, and travel planning for major golf events held in the United States and abroad. The company works with individuals and groups seeking to attend championship tournaments and provides guidance on packages that combine admission with lodging and related services.
