Cestari Shares Fast Method for Peeling Holiday Garlic With Silicone Garlic Peeler Tube

November 09, 2026

LITTLETON, MA - November 09, 2026 -
With Thanksgiving arriving on November 26, home cooks preparing garlic mashed potatoes, roasted garlic, and other seasonal dishes face the familiar task of peeling large quantities of cloves by hand. Cestari is offering practical guidance on how a simple kitchen tool can speed up that work during one of the busiest cooking weeks of the year.

Many traditional holiday recipes call for whole heads of garlic rather than a clove or two, which can turn preparation into a slow and sticky process. The silicone garlic peeler tube addresses that task through a straightforward design. Cooks place several cloves inside the tube, which features ridges along the interior, then roll it firmly under the palm on a countertop. The ridges grip the papery skin and separate it from the clove, leaving the peeled garlic ready for the pot while hands stay free of lingering garlic smell.

The tool has been part of the Cestari catalog and remains available to cooks preparing for the holiday season. The company notes that the approach suits large-batch cooking, when a steady supply of peeled cloves matters most.

"The holidays are when people suddenly find themselves peeling an entire bulb or two at a time, and that is exactly the moment this tool earns its place on the counter," said Susan MacDowell, founder of Cestari. "Rolling the tube takes a few seconds, the skins come off cleanly, and there is no garlic scent clinging to your fingers for the rest of the day."

Cestari offers several tips to make the process smoother. Cooks should first break the whole head into individual cloves before loading the tube, which allows the ridges to make full contact with each piece. Working with a small handful at a time, rather than overfilling, tends to produce the cleanest results. Once the cloves are peeled, the loose skins can be shaken out of the tube directly into the waste bin, keeping the counter and cutting board tidy.

MacDowell added that the method fits naturally into seasonal meal planning. "Anyone working through a stack of garlic recipes for a holiday table can set up a simple rhythm, roll, shake out the skins, repeat, and move on to the next dish without stopping to scrub their hands."

The silicone garlic peeler is made from phthalate-free silicone and is dishwasher safe. Because it relies on a rolling motion rather than pressure against a blade, it separates the skin without crushing the clove, which keeps whole cloves intact for roasting and other preparations that call for them.
