

egli jona ag Opens Show Garden and Pool Exhibition Season in Aathal

November 19, 2026

RAPPERSWIL-JONA, CH - November 19, 2026 - egli jona ag has opened its seasonal show garden and pool exhibition in Aathal near Wetzikon, giving property owners across the Lake Zurich region a chance to view completed outdoor installations ahead of the main planting and construction months. The exhibition presents several built pools alongside a range of materials, planting options and plant containers arranged in realistic garden settings.

The show garden allows visitors to walk through finished examples of landscaping, terraces and water features rather than reviewing designs on paper. The display includes seven different pools, a selection of natural stone, paving and timber materials, and a variety of plantings suited to the local climate. This format is intended to help homeowners and developers compare options and understand how different elements work together across the seasons.

egli jona ag in Switzerland is based at Buechstrasse 38 in Rapperswil-Jona on Lake Zurich and employs around 120 specialists. The team designs and builds gardens, terraces, swimming ponds, natural pools and conventional pools, and it carries out large outdoor projects for residential developments and public spaces. Year-round garden maintenance forms a further part of the company's work, covering lawn care, hedge trimming, plant care, irrigation and seasonal tasks.

The timing of the exhibition reflects the planning cycle common in the region. Garden and pool projects generally require lead time for design, earthworks and construction, which means property owners who begin consultations early tend to see installations completed before the warmer months. The Aathal display is positioned as a reference point for that early-stage planning, bringing together elements that would otherwise be difficult to view in one place.

Across its project work, egli jona ag landscaping combines garden construction, pool building and ongoing maintenance under a single team. This structure allows earthworks, planting, natural stone walls, pathways and terraces to be coordinated from the initial concept through to long-term care. The company applies the same approach to larger commissions undertaken with architectural firms and general contractors, where complex sites require sequenced planning and execution.

Alongside its project and exhibition activity, the company trains landscape gardener apprentices, contributing to the pipeline of skilled workers in the regional trade. Apprentices work within active teams, gaining experience across garden construction, planting and maintenance as part of their qualification.

The show garden also functions as a working demonstration of sustainability choices, including durable materials and plants selected for the Lake Zurich climate. Visitors can observe how pools, terraces, greenery and hardscaping elements are integrated into functional outdoor spaces designed for use throughout the year.
