August 13, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

San Diego is a fantastic choice for the increasingly popular "destination weddings". You can have your wedding at the beach, on the bay, near the harbor, on the rooftop of a sky rise, at a farm, a nightclub, a posh restaurant, the possibilities for a wedding in San Diego are limitless.

Continental Catering has embraced the destination wedding trend and have been helping people from far and wide create their perfect wedding day. It all starts with selecting the perfect venue. Then creating all the details to make it a personable and spectacular event.

"San Diego is an ideal location for a destination wedding because there is no shortage of amazing venues to choose from, ideal weather year round and plenty of activities for out of town guests to enjoy," says Denise Jermyn at Continental Catering.

Continental Catering has worked with people from every corner of the world who have selected San Diego as their wedding destination. The catering company believes that while life is a journey, not a destination, destination is actually incredibly important. They work hand in hand with the bride to make sure all her wishes are catered to and that her location is absolutely perfect. They have a number of venues to suggest to those who are looking at San Diego for their destination wedding, which are found across the county: coastal, downtown, central areas, east county, inland, north county and south bay San Diego. Each of these areas has something truly special to offer for a bride and groom.

Having worked with people from all over the world, the company has receive a range of highly positive reviews, some of which can be seen on www.continentalcateringsd.com/. There you can personal feel how happy their brides were, not just with the quality of the catering, but also with the quality of the overall service and personal attention.

"As an event planner and wedding coordinator for many years, when it came to my daughter's wedding I knew I had to go with one of the best caterers for my 300 guest Italian wedding," says Angel H. from Jamul,

CA. "Not only did Continental allow us a couple different tastings to get the pasta course just like grandpa's, but every detail was perfection."

Continental Catering has an extensive menu for its wedding catering. They ensure all their food both tastes and looks good and is generally wholesome and healthy. Presentation is key, and all their food is beautiful and colorful and presented on a plate as well as would be expected from a Michelin Star restaurant. Destination wedding customers can choose from the seasonal (summer, spring, fall and winter) buffets, sit-downs and stations. The buffets and sit-down include four courses each. The station includes a choice of starters, various main meals and a late night snack.

Destination weddings are the trend of the future with more and more people embracing the concept of a wedding and a vacation all wrapped into one package.
