

Sunstar Construction & Remodeling Addresses Rising Demand for Office Renovations as Workplace Expectations Shift

November 20, 2026

ST. GEORGE, UT - November 20, 2026 -

As more employers increase in-office attendance expectations in 2026, many St. George businesses are discovering that their existing office layouts no longer match the way teams actually work. Sunstar Construction & Remodeling is responding to this shift by focusing attention on office renovation projects designed to help area companies modernize existing workspaces without undertaking a full build-out.

Recent workplace research indicates a widening gap between evolving work patterns and physical office environments. While organizations are bringing employees back to shared spaces more often, many of those spaces were configured for earlier work styles and have not been meaningfully updated. Private offices, conference rooms, reception areas, breakrooms, and worn finishes often reflect assumptions that no longer hold true for daily collaboration and workflow.

Sunstar Construction & Remodeling office renovations are intended to close that gap through targeted changes rather than complete reconstruction. Typical work includes reconfiguring private offices and conference rooms, improving reception and shared areas, refreshing breakrooms and dated surfaces, and creating layouts that support both focused work and team collaboration. An office renovation of this kind can often be completed within an existing footprint, allowing a business to update its environment while keeping its current location.

"Many companies in the region are asking people to be in the office more, but the office itself has not changed in years," said Kevin Tatom, owner of Sunstar Construction & Remodeling. "The questions have moved from whether employees come in to how well the space supports them once they arrive. A renovation does not always mean starting over. Often it means adjusting the layout, updating shared areas, and making the space function the way teams work now."

A central consideration for occupied offices is maintaining normal business activity during construction. Sunstar Construction & Remodeling plans and coordinates renovations in spaces where day-to-day operations may need to continue, phasing work and scheduling around business hours where appropriate. As a general contractor Sunstar Construction & Remodeling serving St. George and surrounding communities draws on local knowledge of building codes and climate considerations to keep projects compliant and on schedule.

"Working in an active office requires planning and clear communication," Tatom said. "The goal is a predictable timeline and a workspace that is ready for the way a company operates, with as little disruption as possible along the way."

The emphasis on existing workplaces is distinct from the broader commercial work the company performs. Sunstar Construction & Remodeling tenant improvements address space adaptations for new tenants and changing uses, while the current focus on office renovations centers on helping established businesses adapt their current environments for changing in-person work patterns.

Sunstar Construction & Remodeling is a licensed general contractor serving Southern Utah, Southern Nevada, and Northern Arizona. With more than 15 years of experience, the company provides commercial construction, tenant improvements, office renovations, new construction, design-build services, flooring installation, building additions, restoration work, and residential remodeling.
