JN Flooring & Remodeling Expands Operations to Offer Hard Surface Installations and Educational Resources

November 18, 2026

CHALFONT, PA - November 18, 2026 -
JN Flooring & Remodeling announced in November 2026 the expansion of its residential and commercial contracting services to provide hard surface flooring in Harleysville, PA, alongside the launch of an online industry publication. The operational expansion addresses growing regional demand from homeowners and commercial property managers for durable, low-maintenance, and environmentally compliant interior surfaces.

Under the expanded service structure, the company now supplies and installs hardwood, laminate, luxury vinyl tile, and ceramic tile across residential and commercial properties. Each material category serves distinct architectural and functional requirements, ranging from moisture resistance in lower-level utility spaces to impact durability in high-traffic commercial corridors. Project estimators evaluate existing subfloor conditions, structural load limits, and room usage before recommending specific material grades. This technical assessment ensures that selected surfaces align with regional building codes and manufacturer warranty specifications.

To support the new contracting division, JN Flooring & Remodeling updated its installation equipment and field workflows for precision cutting, subfloor leveling, and moisture mitigation. Trained in-house crews manage each phase of the project lifecycle, beginning with on-site laser measurements and material acclimation before proceeding to substrate preparation and final trim installation. Structured project schedules are established prior to construction to limit operational downtime for commercial tenants and minimize household disruption for residential clients.

Company leadership noted that long-term shifts in local construction and renovation preferences prompted the addition of specialized surface contracting. "Property owners across Montgomery County are increasingly requesting long-lasting alternatives to traditional carpeting, which led the company to broaden its installation capabilities," said John Nichols, Chief Executive Officer of JN Flooring & Remodeling. "Adding dedicated inventory and installation teams for hard surface materials enables the firm to accommodate both residential renovations and commercial build-outs," Nichols added that direct supplier partnerships allow the company to maintain consistent material availability throughout the calendar year.

The service expansion also incorporates environmentally certified building materials to align with updated regional sustainability practices. Available product lines include responsibly harvested domestic hardwoods, recyclable luxury vinyl formulations, and low-emission installation adhesives designed to preserve indoor air quality. Property owners seeking to reduce construction waste can review lifecycle durability ratings and environmental documentation during the pre-construction planning phase. These material options reflect broader municipal and commercial guidelines encouraging lower volatile organic compound levels in renovated interiors.

In conjunction with the expanded contracting division, JN Flooring & Remodeling launched an informational blog on its official website to share technical guidance on hard surface flooring in Harleysville, PA. Published articles examine routine maintenance protocols, seasonal humidity control, subfloor preparation standards, and comparative material lifespans. The digital publication serves as a reference tool for property owners, facility managers, and building contractors evaluating long-term surface investments. Editorial updates are scheduled regularly to address common installation questions and evolving industry standards.

Regional construction trends indicate that hard surface materials remain a standard specification in contemporary remodeling projects due to their cleanability and multi-decade service life. By integrating material procurement with in-house installation, JN Flooring & Remodeling coordinates supply chain logistics and labor scheduling under a single contracting agreement. The division handles projects ranging from single-room residential updates to multi-unit commercial flooring replacements across southeastern Pennsylvania.
