Printbox London Responds to Demand for Walk-In Passport Photo Service

November 27, 2026 -
Printbox London (Same Day Printing London) has highlighted its walk-in passport and ID photo service for residents and commuters across Haringey, in response to a steady stream of customers who need a compliant photo produced at short notice ahead of a travel, visa, or paperwork deadline.

Printbox London (Same Day Printing London) provides passport and ID photos for residents and commuters throughout Haringey, producing images to current UK passport and visa photo specifications on a walk-in basis, rather than asking customers to book an appointment or order online and wait for delivery. The service runs from the shop's West Green Road premises in South Tottenham, which the business has traded from since 2014, a short walk from Seven Sisters Underground and Overground station, where a large number of customers already pass through on a working day, and it can be combined with the shop's other document services in the same visit.

Haringey's dense transport network, including stations on the Piccadilly line and the Gospel Oak to Barking Overground route through South Tottenham, brings a steady flow of commuters past the West Green Road shop, and the business says many arrive needing a photo for a passport renewal, a visa application or right-to-rent paperwork rather than planning the errand as part of a longer visit.

Alongside the printed passport and ID photographs it produces at the counter, the shop also supplies digital passport photographs and photo codes for customers applying for their UK passport online, so a single visit can cover both the printed copy needed for some applications and the digital file required for others. Customers arranging travel to visit family abroad, or renewing a travel document ahead of a planned trip, make up a further recurring share of the counter's passport photo orders.

Local micro-businesses and sole traders, a group Haringey carries in significant numbers, have separately used the service for staff identification photos and right-to-work or DBS check paperwork, often needed when a new starter or an apprentice joins a small firm, and often printed at the same visit as other documents or business card orders. The busy shopping parade along Green Lanes, close to the shop, adds to the general footfall of people already in the area for other errands who use the passport photo counter while they are nearby, rather than making the trip specifically for it.

Every photo is checked against the applicable size and background specifications for the customer's passport, visa or ID photo requirements before it is handed to the customer. Staff talk customers through what a particular application requires, since passports, visas, and other identity documents can each carry slightly different size and background rules. The service can be used as a standalone visit or alongside the shop's other document services, including photocopying, scanning and document printing, all available from the same West Green Road counter.

Kapil Nath, Owner at Printbox London (Same Day Printing London), said the shop has kept the passport photo service deliberately quick and walk-in friendly because of how often the need arises without much warning. "People do not always know they need a new photo until they are filling out a form the same week," Nath said. "We wanted it to be something you can walk in for, get done properly, and get on with the rest of your day rather than having to book somewhere else and come back."

The passport and ID photo counter sits alongside the shop's wider range of store services, including photocopying, scanning, document printing and lamination, all available from the same West Green Road visit. Printbox London (Same Day Printing London) continues to offer the service on a walk-in basis with no appointment required, alongside its established range of print and stationery services. The photo counter follows the same in-person, advice-led approach the shop applies across its other services, with staff on hand to check a customer has the right shot before they leave, rather than finding out later that it has been rejected. The business's Facebook page carries further information about the shop's photo services.
