July 12, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Avasia, based in Beaverton, Oregon, has announced the launch of a new range of baby products. The company has recently stated that they will be branching out from supplements and will be offering non-supplement products for parents with newborn babies. Avasia is a family owned and operated business, run by sisters who have made it their goal to offer quality prenatal products.

Natasha Avasia with the company says, "Our goal has always been to help expectant mothers to get the most out of their pregnancies, and to enjoy them fully without worries that are often associated with pregnancy. It just seemed that branching out to now include newborn products was the natural thing to do."

The company invites expectant mothers and fathers to follow them on Twitter at <https://twitter.com/AvasiaPrenatal> to stay updated on the new products as they are releasing. Avasia says that every product they have chosen for their newly launched newborn baby line has been carefully considered to determine its usefulness to new parents as well as its safety to babies. The company says that all of the new products in the line will be things that expectant parents will need, love, or both.

"We only provide quality products," says Natasha, "because we know how important it is to take care of yourself when you're pregnant. We understand fully the importance of caring for yourself and your little bundle of joy."

Avasia states that all of their products are created using the best quality raw materials or natural ingredients. Their aim is to provide prenatal and now newborn products that are high quality.

Avasia currently provides a range of products such as supplements for expectant mothers. Their new products, as well as information regarding pregnancy, breastfeeding, in vitro fertilization, and various other topics of interest to new and expecting parents, together with more about the company, including a complete list of their current and newly launched products, can be seen on their official website at <http://avasia.com>.
