House prices in the United Kingdom are very high, and it is becoming increasingly difficult for first time buyers to move out of the family home or out of rented accommodation and get on the property ladder. Lemon Tree Financial, a company in Harrow, Middlesex, United Kingdom, helps first time buyers through the minefield of purchasing a new home. They do this by advising them on their personal financial position, including affordability and providing suitable options to put them on the right path towards finding a first time buyer property, in line with their personal goals.

Mitul from Lemon Tree Financial says: "It seems that getting on the property ladder is now nothing short of impossible for most people. There are so many barriers put in their place, not in the least the incredibly high prices of even the smallest properties. When you consider a studio apartment in London was listed for 500,000GBP, it quickly becomes clear why so many first time buyers feel they will never be able to own a property of their own. We are there to help them, however, and to show them that there are possibilities out there."

Offering first time buyer advice, Lemon Tree Financial understand like no other how difficult it can be to understand the various legalities and financial paperwork surrounding buying a first home, and how disheartening it can sometimes be. As such, through their experienced team is there to assist new buyers.

"Yes, properties are incredibly expensive," adds Mitul, "and yes, the various paperwork and bureaucracy that buyers need to contend with is like a minefield. But we are there to help people navigate through it, so that they too can finally get on the property ladder and realize their personal goals."
