ICANGET2, a Florida based company led by CEO Michael T. Glaspie, has launched a smartphone app for businesses and entrepreneurs. The app, which is called the Silent Salesman, is designed to act not only as a connector between businesses and consumers, but also as a mobile marketing system which continues to work long after quitting time. The app works in tandem with ICANGET2's text messaging and push notification platform, strengthening its stance as a marketing tool, and helping it stand up against similar marketing products.

The app is completely customizable to suit each individual business' needs, allowing for unique content, while still implementing real time updates and notifications. Business owners and entrepreneurs interested can view a customizable app here. ICANGET2 describes the benefits of the app as being a multiple of a single email or website visit, stating: "Internet marketing experts tell us the value of each email subscriber is worth one dollar per month but a text message or push notification subscriber combined with your own custom phone app subscriber is worth 10, 20, or 30x that, this is enormous."

This new application is described as an entrepreneur's best friend, providing an affordable option for early marketing and customer interaction. The ICANGET2 website even goes so far as to offer insight into promoting the Silent Salesman app. It uses various concepts including contests and draws for special prizes for those who use the app, digital coupons for app users, and other exciting bonuses and promotional offers.

The application is available through the company's main website, and ICANGET2 encourages potential users to "download my personal App for Apple Users shortcode: MarketingApp." The company advises, "Make no mistake about it, the smart phone industry is quickly and not so quietly replacing PCs and laptops as the communication method of choice. Our custom phone app works with every single smart phone on the planet."

The company adds that Android users can also take part when they "download my personal app for Andoid Users shortcode: MarketingApp." For more information on the Silent Salesman and other services offered through ICANGET2, the company encourages newcomers to visit the main website, or call for details.
